The Latest Railroad Grant of Land—Central Branch of the Union Pacific—The Interested Parties—Western Whisky Interests and the Tax and Tariff Bill—The Missing Packages of Greenbacks—The Bounty Bill—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The passage, yesterday, by the Senate of the bill for the relief of the Central Branch Union Pacific Railroad Company again takes out of that body one of the questions about which there has been a long and bitter controversy. One Relief bill was passed two years ago but failed in the House. The present bill will go into that branch with the support of its own Railroad Committee and seems likely enough to succeed. This road got certain rights under the acts of July, 2862 and July, 1864, of which it claims that it has been deprived by the rulings of the Interior Department, under the act of June, 1866, against the passage of which it earnestly remonstrated. It has built its line from Atchison to a point 100 miles north of west, out in Kansas, and now asks such legislation as will enable it to form a connection with the line of the Union Pacific, just west of Fort Kearney. It asserts that it is entitled to a subsidy of Government bonds, but now proposes to compromise on a gift of twenty sections of land per mile for its extension. The peculiar feature in connection with the grant is that it will largely give the road the even-numbered instead of the odd-numbered sections. This result is due to the fact that the odd-numbered ones have been given to the so called St. Joe and Denver Road, which lies to the northward at a varying distance of twelve to thirty miles from the proposed line of the Central Branch. The bill was opposed on four grounds, viz.: By those who object to any further railroad grants at present; by Mr. ROSS, who wants the Central Branch to make other connections than those it proposes to make; by Mr. THAYER, who wanted to have the lands it would get in Nebraska for companies in which his people are directly interested, and by Mr. SHERMAN and others who objected that all the land in the strip, 50 miles wide by 200 miles long, except such as is now in the hands of settlers, would pass into the control of railroad corporations. Mr. HOWARD produced a paper showing that the Central Branch, and the St. Joe Roads had come to such an agreement as would prevent any clashing there, and Mr. TIPTON secured a little amendment, which, he said, would prevent any trouble with the Nebraska roads. The bill was carried through on the ground that the Central Branch is entitled to some relief. If it passes the House, the road, when built, will furnish a feeder to the Union Pacific from St. Louis and Southern Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Among the persons most deeply interested in the line, which by the bill gets something like two million acres of land, are the Governor of Massachusetts, George S. Hale, Nathaniel Thayer, J. W. Brooks and R. M. Pomeroy, of Boston; John A. Stewart, Wm. C. Wetmore, A. S. Barnes, Henry Day and E. H. Nichols, of New-York, and Erastus Corning, of Albany.

THE TAX AND TARIFF BILL.

The TAX and Tariff bill was further considered by the Senate Finance Committee on Saturday, but progress upon it is slow, because Messrs. WILLIAMS and WARNER are so much engaged with the special San Domingo Committee. Parties representing the Western whisky interest are here and asking from the Committee certain modifications in existing laws. They represent that the twenty-five cent stamp tax authorized by the act of July, 1868, yields but about $720,000 annually; the one per cent. tax on sales of rectifiers and wholesale dealers, about $1,833,000, and the fifty cents per barrel tax on rectifiers about $800,000. They argue that these taxes are vexatious, and, to some extent, unequal, and that to abolish them would be an advantage to the Government as well as to the manufacturers, and they say that if the revenue cannot be spared it would be far better to increase from $4 to $6 the special tax per barrel at distilleries. This change, they hold, would not decrease the actual revenue more than $176,000 annually, while the apparent deficiency would be more than made good by saving on reduction of officers and a decrease in the expenses of collection. They state further that a single large tax is much less irksome and burdensome than such a multiplication of small taxes as are imposed under existing laws. The Committee do not yet say what they will do in the matter. The opinion expressed in some quarters that they will divide the pending bill and report one TAX bill and one Tariff bill is spoken of by some of the members as wholly without foundation.

BOUNTIES.

The little Bounty bill, which goes to the White House to-morrow for the President's signature, simply extends to the 1st of next December the time for presenting claims for additional bounties under the act of July 28, 1866, and it was stated in the Senate that it would not affect more than two or three hundred persons.

THE MISSING TEN-DOLLAR GREENBACKS.

The officials of Gen. SPINNER's office in the Treasury are a good deal mystified by the sudden disappearance of two bundles of ten-dollar notes of the new issue of greenbacks, aggregating $20,000, which disappeared yesterday afternoon from one of the rooms of his Bureau. These bundles were received yesterday morning from the Printing Division, and at 3 o'clock, were lying on a table in the room from which they disappeared. About that time two ladies and a gentleman visited the room and were shown through it by the official in charge, to whom one of the ladies was well known. Two young men followed this party into the room, the official thinking they belonged to the same party. One of the two looked around a little and walked past the table where the bundles of money were lying, while the other somewhat insolently stepped up to the colored woman who was watching the table, and asked her some impertinent questions. She responded with proper spirit, and the two immediately left the room. The loss of the money was not discovered until nearly an hour afterward, and the theory of the clerks and officials is that the money was stolen by one of these fellows at the moment while the other was talking with the colored woman. The ladies and gentlemen at work in the room, about one hundred in number, were all kept there night until after 11 o'clock, and a thorough search and recount of the money was made. Detectives have been busily engaged all day in working up the matter.

NEW CITY GOVERNMENT.

The new City Government will be inaugurated to-morrow. Mayor HENRY will have one or two majority in the upper, and a very large majority in the lower branch of the Councils. It is expected that there will be a very general change in the officials about the City Hall, and in other departments of the City Government within a short time, and a considerable crowd of "dead beats" and used "bummers" will be given an opportunity to make a living by their own exertions, if possible.

PERSONAL.

The President, Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of War, Attorney-General and Vice-Admiral POREROY are now all absent from the city. The President is expected back on Tuesday morning, if he does not go from Pennsylvania to West Point, in which case he will be absent until near the end of the week. Secretary BOUTWELL is not expected back until Thursday or Friday, and Secretary BELKNAP may return on Wednesday. Commissioner DELANO is confined to his bed by severe neuralgia. Assistant DOUGLAS has got back and is acting as Commissioner. The Russian Minister and his wife leave for Long Island to-morrow or next day. The Danish Minister and his wife are going to Denmark about the end of this month, to be gone until December.

NORTH CAROLINA POLITICS.

In the North Carolina Congressional Districts, COBB, of the First; HERIOT, of the Second; DOCKERY, of the Third, and SHOBER, of the Sixth, have been renominated. LASH will probably be renominated in the Fifth, and JONES in the Seventh, while HARRIS, a colored man, takes DEWEES's place in the Fourth.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

THE ST. THOMAS TREATY.

Letters received from Denmark show that the Government and statesmen of that country continue to be much mortified at the neglect of the Senate of the United States on the subject of the St. Thomas treaty, that body having two years ago been informed of its ratification by Denmark, and the period for the exchange of ratifications having been several times extended at the request of the Government. The last time expired on the 14th of April. The Senate allowed it to elapse without one word for or against the treaty. The correspondence says the people feel now, as heretofore, that it is a clear breach of international good breeding, and that they have not been treated with the consideration that one friendly Power should show to another. It was supposed that the Senate, at the present session, would take some notice of the matter; but in this there has been disappointment. It seems to be settled that Denmark will make no further movement on that subject, especially in view of the fact that the proposition to purchase was originally made by the Executive Department of this Government, Denmark being reluctant at first to enter into the negotiation. It appears from these letters that the treatment by the Senate is more complained of than would have been the failure to ratify the treaty, and that if the treaty had been promptly acted on, though rejected, this would have left less unfriendly feeling than is now manifested among the Danish people.

THE INDIANS.

Other Delegations Coming—The Bill for Expenses—Red Cloud's Indispositions to be Shown.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Secretary of the Interior has given permission to delegations of the Osage and Pawnee tribes of Indians to come here on business, and one or both parties are expected within the next ten days. To pay the expenses of these parties, as well as the expenses of the Red Cloud and Spotted Tail parties, is the object of the bill appropriating $50,000 which was passed by the Senate yesterday. It failed of consideration in the House because of objections, but will probably be passed in a day or two, after some members have made speeches upon it, if they can get a chance. The Secretary and Commissioner of Indian Affairs desired to send all these parties home by the way of New-York, so that they might have an opportunity to see more of our strength and resources. SPOTTED TAIL and his associates are now in New-York for this purpose, but RED CLOUD said at the council yesterday, in pretty plain terms, that he had no desire to go there to see or be seen, but wanted to go home by the most direct route. How the matter will be adjusted with him is not yet determined.

SECRETARY COX ON SALES OF INDIAN LANDS.

The Secretary of the Interior, in some conversation yesterday about Indian affairs, declared himself to the effect that it was against our policy to permit the sale of large tracts of public land by treaty, and said he thought there was no constitutional authority for disposing of lands held in occupancy by Indian tribes to railroad companies, or other third parties under treaty stipulations, and he could not favor the making of treaties for such a purpose.

Interview Between Senator Morrill, of Maine, and Red Cloud—Delegate Hooper, of Utah, on the Indians—Red Cloud Coming to New-York.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Senator MORRILL, of Maine, Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, and who had charge of the Indian Appropriation bill, and Delegate HOOPER, of Utah, called yesterday evening on RED CLOUD to pay their respects.

MR. MORRILL'S REMARKS.

The Senator assured RED CLOUD of his profound sympathy with him and his race, and that Congress, the "Great Council" the President and the people would deal justly with the Indians. For his part, he was convinced they had been too much neglected and abused, which operated to the injury of the whites as well as the red men of the West. If RED CLOUD were to go North he would find multitudes of friends who would be glad to take him by the hand and stand by him and his people long after he had left them. The country needs peace alike from the East and the West, and our people, he hoped RED CLOUD would be convinced of this when he saw with what warm-hearted interest he would be received by the people of the land.

REPLY OF THE CHIEF.

RED CLOUD thanked him, and said he had received much kindness while here from the big chiefs, but he could not forget his people at home. He was sent here to care for their interests, and he thought of them sleeping and waking, for they were on his heart. He had asked for the removal of Fort Fetterman because it was a curse to his people, and instead of protecting them as the Great Father had told him, it had only brought mischief into his country by whisky drinking, abusing squaws and other bad work. He hoped there would be no war, and there would not if the whites hesitated to the Sioux to commence it. His people, having no food, have to hunt, and when they do that they were told they were off their reservation and were shot at. This made trouble, and the Indians get the blame, as they have no writers or papers.

Delegate HOOPER was introduced, and said his people—the Mormons—had suffered and recommended the Indians for the last twenty years through the Sioux country, with their women and children, cattle and goods. In all that time, though more than 60,000 persons, they had never lost a life, an animal or a bale of goods until the railroad was built; since which they had lost some property on the trains. He felt it his duty to bear this testimony to the good conduct of RED CLOUD and his people toward them.

RED CLOUD thanked him and said he knew the Mormons; they had always talked straight and dealt fairly with his people.

RED CLOUD and his party will leave Washington to-morrow noon for New-York, where they will remain a day or two, and thence proceed directly home. They will be under the charge of Gen. SPINNER, in whom they have full confidence. Col. BULLOCK, Mr. BEAUVAIS and JOHN RICHARDS, the interpreter, will accompany the party.

THE VISIT TO NEW-YORK POSTPONED.

The departure of RED CLOUD and his party for New-York, which was to have taken place to-morrow, has been postponed. He desires another conference with the Government authorities, which will probably be granted.

GENERAL TELEGRAMS.

EUROPE.

The British Conservatives and Compulsory Education—Prussian Efforts at Spain to Obtain a King.

LONDON, June 12.—The Conservative members of Parliament held a private meeting in Saturday night and resolved to support the Government's Compulsory Education bill and oppose the amendments offered by Mr. HARCOURT and the National Educational League. Lord DERBY is reported to have published to-day from opposition to the Irish Land bill, and to seek only to make such amendments as will render the measure acceptable to the House of Lords.....The John Bull, a weekly journal, publishes a rumor that the Marquis of BUTE is about to adjure Romanism.

MADRID, June 12.—The session of the Cortes, yesterday, was wholly devoted to debate on the election of a monarch, but no result was reached, and hardly any progress has been made since the commencement of the discussion on Monday. The journals generally express dissatisfaction at the dilatory and indecisive character of the proceedings.

The Southern Troubles—A Movement from Austria Threatened—The Slavonian Army.

FLORENCE, June 12.—The Economists reports that the correspondence between the Italian and Swiss Governments, on the subject of the threatened invasion of Italy by the adherents of MAZZINI, has assumed a milder tone. A dispatch from Vienna states that a descent of Italian revolutionists from Austrian territory is threatened, and that the Austrian Government is taking measures to guard against the movement.

MUNICH, June 12.—The Minister of War proposes a considerable reduction in the military establishment.

The Turf—Race at Longchamps Yesterday—The Grand Prize of Paris.

PARIS, June 12.—The race for the Paris Prize took place at Longchamps today, and was attended by a vast multitude of spectators from Paris and the surrounding country. The Emperor, the Empress and the Prince Imperial were present, and were received with great enthusiasm. Special interest was taken in the race, as many English and other foreign horses were entered. The prize was won easily by the French filly Sornette, with two French colts second and third.

SOUTH AMERICA.

Peace Signed with Paraguay—The Revolution in Entre Rios.

LONDON, June 12.—Advices from Rio Janeiro to the 23d ult. have been received. Señor PARANHOS, Commissioner of the Brazilian Government, had returned to Asuncion, where he had signed the treaty of peace with Paraguay.

The revolutionary movement in Entre Rios and Uruguay continued.

CUBA.

The Case of the Hornet—Release of the Vessel by Order of the President.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Cuban privateer Hornet has been under seizure since last Fall at Wilmington, N. C. Mr. LEWIS, as Charge of the Cuban Republic, appeared in the District Court of North Carolina in November last, and claimed the vessel as the property of the Cuban Republic; but Judge BROOKS decided the Court could not take notice of the existence of the Republic of Cuba. An appeal was taken from this decision to the Circuit, but yesterday the President directed the release of the vessel, and all the property seized to Mr. FERNANDO MACIAS, the original purchaser of the vessel from the United States Government, requiring, however, bonds in the sum of $20,000 that the vessel shall not be used to commit hostilities against Spain, nor in any other way, in violation to the Neutrality laws of the United States. Gen. G. B. FITZ HUGH and Hon. W. E. CHANDLER are the sureties upon the bond of Mr. MACIAS. The vessel and other property restored are valued at about $100,000, and the decision of the President to release is the cause of great rejoicing among the friends of the Cuban patriots.

A Divorced Husband Accused of Bigamy and Adultery—A Curious Case.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., June 12.—In the Court of Quarter Sessions, yesterday, before Judge ALLISON, an interesting case was heard, the charge being adultery and bigamy, against GILBERT R. RODAN and MARY TULLY. In the year 1839, GILBERT RODAN was married in the City of New-York to CHARLOTTE SEAFORD, and continued to reside with her until 1866—thirty-six years—having by her eight children. In 1860 RODAN, being sexton of Christ Church, in New-York, took up with one MARY TULLY, and left New-York and came to Philadelphia, where they have continued to reside ever since. The adultery with the said MARY TULLY was committed in April, 1869, and June following the decree of divorce was granted, on the application of Mrs. RODAN. A certified copy of the divorce proceedings in New-York, in which it was set forth that the divorce was granted upon proof of the commission of adultery by GILBERT RODAN with MARY TULLY, was read. On behalf of the defendant, his counsel admitted that they had been living together as man and wife, which they really are, the marriage having taken place in October, four months after the decree of divorce. By the New-York statute, as also by the statute of Pennsylvania, it is declared that when a divorce is obtained on the ground of adultery, the guilty party is not permitted to marry, during the divorced wife's lifetime. The Judge said that it was clear the decree of divorce separated the husband and wife absolutely, but it was a question, and the only question in the case, whether the Court should not give effect to the New-York statute. If so the defendant, GILBERT RODAN, has been guilty of adultery. The crime of adultery is not indictable or punishable in the State of Pennsylvania unless the offense is committed within its jurisdiction; and there is no evidence of the crime of adultery having been committed in this State. The Court reserved its decision. The defendant, with a good appearance, and about forty years old, RODAN is apparently about fifty-five years of age.

Marine Disaster—Wreck of a Spanish Bark in a Fog.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 11.—The Northern Transportation Company's steamer Active, while on the way from Victoria to San Francisco, was wrecked twenty-two miles south of Cape Mendocino on the 6th of June, during the prevalence of a dense fog. The passengers and a portion of the baggage were saved, but the vessel is a total loss.

The Coopers' Strike in Philadelphia—Remarkable Combustibility of Coopers' Shops.

PHILADELPHIA, June 12.—The coopers of this city are now on a strike. During the week several coopering establishments have been burned. On Friday night two were burned in the lower part of the city, and early this morning a large barrel factory of WILLIAM H. THOMAS, on Twelfth and Willow streets, was entirely destroyed. The building was six stories and 160 feet long, was in an unfinished condition, and contained no stock. One man has been committed for trial for arson.

CINCINNATI, June 12.—The International Typographical Union excursionists returned about 4 o'clock this morning, having spent the night on the river, in feasting, toasting, speaking and dancing. All appear delighted with their reception here, and especially with the festivities of last night, which they entered into soon after the sans de adjournment. A large number went home today.

EUROPEAN MAIL NEWS.

ARRIVAL OF THE BREMEN STEAM-SHIP DEUTSCHLAND.

The steam-ship Deutschland, from Bremen May 28 and Northampton May 31, reached this port late Saturday night. Her mails were delivered yesterday, and they contain advices later by two days than those at hand by the Java.

Mr. DOUGLAS, of the Argosie, has offered to sail the Cambria two return matches, each sixty miles to windward and back.

The Maples Assize Court has delivered its sentence upon the band of brigands which captured Messrs. MORSE and MURRAY. The chief, MARIS, and two others, are condemned to death; nine of the prisoners to penal servitude for life, three to twenty-one years' imprisonment, and one to twenty years.

Within the last few days, the following cotton-laden steamers had arrived at Liverpool from Bombay via the Suez Canal: The Syndil Castle, with 7,073 bales; the Brandenburg, with 6,500 bales; the Fire Queen, with 5,800 bales; the Millbank, with 5,170 bales, and the Magdala, with 7,600 bales.

The Russian nobleman, COUNT KOUCHELEFF, a man of enormous wealth, and a well-known amateur of art, has just died suddenly at St. Petersburg, from the effects of an apoplectic attack. By his will his vast properties pass to his nephew, and his brother-in-law, the famous spiritualist medium, Mr. DOUGLAS HOME, derives no benefit from that document.

A British Royal Commission is about to be dispatched to Demerara. Complaints have reached the ears of the Colonial Office as to the cruel treatment to which many of the coolies are subjected, and the Government has in consequence determined to institute an official inquiry. One of the Commissioners will be sent out from England, but the others will be selected from the colonial Bar. The planters are loud in their protest against the investigation.

The suppression of the Hôtel des Invalides is the object of a bill brought forward in the French Legislative Body by MM. GLAIS-BIZOIN, PELLERAN and ALFRED DUMESNIL-MARTIGNY, in these terms: "From the 1st of January, 1871, the Hotel des Invalides shall be abolished. The 600 old soldiers at present living there shall, on their demand, be sent home to their families or received in the charitable establishments of their cantons. The buildings and offices shall be placed at the disposal of the Minister of War, to establish there the offices of his department."

According to a Berlin correspondent of the Patrie, the Prussians are about to construct very strong works upon the island of Alsen, which, when completed, will, it is believed, render the passage through Alsen impossible. There will come three star-shaped forts, with double tiers of guns, and five coast batteries commanding the passage of the Little Belt. All these batteries will be non-faced and armed with the heaviest ordnance. Operations are also going on towards the Hornsyl Halle, a wide and deep bay, which it is intended to make impassable by sinking and shattering the Federal fleet. "When these works are completed," adds the Patrie, "Prussia, which is already firmly established in the formidable position of Duppel, will have the command of the North Sea, the Baltic, and the Straits."

M. LABOULAYE has requested permission to suspend for a time his course of lectures at the College de France, finding it impossible to obtain a hearing from the excited and noisy assemblages which have recently gathered in his class-room. The offense imputed to M. LABOULAYE is his supposed willingness to have joined the present Ministry, but the opposition to him appears to have been provoked from other than the students under his immediate instruction, a large body of whom have declared their sympathy with and admiration of their maligned Professor. The contest between the two fractions, one opposing and the other supporting the lecturer, has been so animated that M. LABOULAYE considered it prudent to dismiss a crisis which only entails annoyance and insult upon himself without conferring advantage upon any body of students. The moderate Liberal papers approve M. LABOULAYE's conduct and strongly condemn the violence of those who have rendered necessary the suspension of lectures from one of the most eminent teachers of political science to be found in France.

The subjoined letter from MEROTTI GARIBALDI is published in the Italian journals as having been addressed to the editor of a Bologna organ: "MY DEAR FRIEND: Thanks for your friendly letter. LANZA fled, and with intention, when he represented me as a paladin of the Victor Emmanuel Government. At the same time he had me watched by a Police agent; while the carriage and the guards were scampered round my house during the three days that the movement lasted. It is unnecessary for me to make my profession of faith as a Republican. I may deplore the excessive impatience of these warm-hearted young men; but to fight against them, and for whom? For the rumbiage of thieves and mercenaries called the Italian Government? Never. Salute our friends for me, and tell them that my carbine is ready, and that when the fitting moment arrives, I shall be at my post. Make what use of this letter you please." The Italian Government has no intention of prosecuting the writer of this letter, the Cabinet believing that public opinion will not fail to treat it according to its merits.

In the House of Commons, May 30, Mr. MACFIE asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether negotiations were in progress or completed for international copyright arrangements with the United States of America, which or he would place the general tenor of those arrangements, and whether Parliament would have an opportunity of considering them before they were confirmed in the form of a treaty. Mr. OTWAY said that, as negotiations were still pending on that subject between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of the United States, it was impossible now to state which the tenor of the arrangements would be. The question was not unattended with difficulty, and his noble friend the Secretary of State was very desirous of conferring with certain eminent authors and publishers on the subject. As to the last part of the honorable gentleman's question, he was informed that the Government of the Queen of Copyright Acts could be put in operation by the Crown by order in council in favor of any country which conceded reciprocal advantages to this country. A convention with the United States would be within the power given by that act, and therefore would not necessitate further legislation on the subject.

The Paris Gaulois publishes a report that it is has been decided that after the solemn promulgation of the definition of Papal infallibility the Council of the Vatican will adjourn until the month of October, several European Bishops, who are about to return to their dioceses have inquired of Cardinal ANTONELLI respecting the probable duration of the Council in order that they may make arrangements for the due administration of affairs in their respective dioceses. The Roman correspondent of the Memorial writes that "the Cardinal Secretary of State has not concealed from his interlocutors that the deliberations of the sacred Synod will probably occupy the whole of the year 1871, as the Pope will take advantage of its assembly to proceed to a complete reform of ecclesiastical discipline—a subject which must inevitably give occasion for protracted and animated discussions, seeing that it will be necessary to apply a radical remedy to the laxity of which Germany especially affords a melancholy spectacle. The German Bishops being mostly selected from among the theological professors of the colleges and universities do not bring to the maintenance of ecclesiastical discipline that rigorous solicitude which is displayed by the prelates of other Catholic countries." The same journal adds that during the adjournment of the Council the Bishops of all parts in Europe will return to their flocks. The Bishops coming in other parts of the world will spend the Sabbath in the various convent houses which the Pope has hired for their use in the neighborhood of Rome, at Frascati, Tivoli, Castel Gandolfo, &c., "the salubrious air of which will materially contribute to restore them from the fatigue caused by their labors and the great heat, which already begins to be felt in the Eternal City."

ENGLISH AFFAIRS.

Strangers in the Room of Commons—The Discussion of the Contagious Diseases Act—"The Ventilation of Evils"—Latest Horrors—The Education Difficulty.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, May 28, 1870.

Strangers have no right to be present at the debates in the House of Commons. If the Speaker sees any one there who is not a member of Parliament, it is his duty to order him to be turned out. If any member informs the Speaker that a stranger is in the House, he must be turned out. This is an unreasonable usage which has the force of law—greater force in fact, for a law may be repealed, or violated, or become a dead letter by disuse; but a custom, which especially an English custom, never can be. The reporter has only right to be in the House of Commons, and he is there behind the Speaker, because that noble gentleman in a paswig does not choose to see him, and no one informs him of his presence. The Speaker is too near-sighted to see the strangers' gallery in front of him, and if he gives orders to his own gallery, it is in a fit of absence of mind, and he does not remember it. The ladies in their latticed cage are not constituted present. Of course, any report of the debate is a breach of privilege, and you have only to look in the Times to see how large are these parliamentary breaches.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACT.

The other night Mr. POWLES moved the repeal of the Contagious Diseases Act, about which England has got into such an absurd entanglement. The moment he mentioned the improper subject, a squeamish Scotch member rose to order and gravely informed the Speaker that there were strangers in the House. Several members remonstrated against this, and the Speaker asked the gentleman if he persisted in his statement. He did persist, and the Speaker said he was obliged to order the House to be cleared. So all the galleries were emptied. The reporters picked up their note-books and marched off, the ladies, who had been vainly warned off before, went pouting and indignant from their dark hiding-place, and then the debate proceeded. Of course the only reports we have of the debate are surreptitious ones furnished by honorable members, and at 11 P. M., after four hours' absence, the reporters went back into their gallery and were told that the debate had been adjourned for a month. Meantime, Mr. GLADSTONE had announced that the whole subject would be handed over to a Royal Commission for a thorough investigation. It is high time. The ravages of a foul disease, willfully disseminated, were sapping the strength of the army and navy, and corrupting the life-blood of the civil population—yet the first effort to check the disease rouses a passionate and fanatical resistance. Associations are formed, public meetings held, Parliament flooded with petitions for a repeal of the act, and remonstrances against its extension, largely signed by women and children, who, it must be presumed, had but a faint idea of the subject of their indignant remonstrances. In every movement of this kind the first step is to form an association. Circulars are issued, and those who sympathize with the objects send in adhesions and contributions. A circular has just been sent me by a lady, in which I am invited to aid in forming "A National Association for the Eradication of the Social Evil." Eradication is a good strong word—though the Saxon spreading roots be better. In this circular I am informed that "the time appears to have come when an effort may be made, with some little hope of success, to direct the public feeling called out by the Contagious Diseases act and by the revelations to which they have given rise, to an attack upon the causes of prostitution." For, it is said, "the law of supply and demand is as true in regard to fallen women as it is in regard to any other article that is bought and sold. All those who desire the supply to be stopped, ought to direct their most strenuous efforts to eradicate the demand. When this ceases the supply will cease, and not till then." This is what has been so often urged upon those who wish to lay violent hands upon the liquor traffic. The rum would do no mischief if no one wished to drink it. Stop the demand, and you shut up all distilleries. To "eradicate the demand," it is proposed to form a National Association, having for its principle that the law of chastity is of universal obligation on all men and all women alike," and such a society, it is said, if it shall accomplish its contemplated work, "will contribute to a social reformation of a very deep and wide character, extending into regions, perhaps, not much thought of in this connection. I should rather think so. Finally, I am invited to communicate with either a London solicitor of large practice, or one of two ladies widely known both in England and America. In a few months you may expect to hear of reports, meetings, papers and publications on the means of carrying out this perfectly logical and philosophical method of eradicating the social evil and all its physical and moral consequences.

"THE VENTILATION OF EVILS."

The people of this country seem to be ready now for the discussion of any subject whatever. Royal Commissions, divorce trials, no-popery lectures and pamphlets, contagious diseases acts and discussions, and sensation novels, seem to have educated the people so far into the knowledge of good and evil, that they are ready for anything. What SWEDENBORG calls the ventilation of evils has been going on to such an extent that things which would have been a few years ago inexpressibly shocking, are now matters of public discussion in mixed assemblies and general society. Things which have always been treated with closed doors, in profound secrecy, by the London Police Magistrates, are now brought before crowded Court-rooms and reported in the leading journals; worse yet, the photographs of persons charged with the most infamous and abominable crimes are exhibited in the shop windows of the metropolis, and even in those of distant country villages. Stopping at the window of the Royal Library of one of the loveliest little pleasure towns of England a few days ago, my eyes were shocked with pictures of the ghastly heads of seven Greek brigands cut off and hung by the hair upon a wall in the sunshine, and close beside them three caries of the wretched young men now on remand at Bow-street, charged with unmentionable abominations—and, to make the matter more scandalous and outrageous, if possible, one of the cartes contains the portrait of a noble lord, the possible heir of a dukedom. During the hearings of this case, which I have hitherto shrunk from even alluding to, though it has been the subject of leaders in several London journals, the Police Court has been crowded to suffocation, not by the rabble of the neighborhood of St. Giles and the Seven Dials, but by the aristocracy of St. James and Pall Mall. And the accused do not belong to the lower classes. One is the son of a Northumberland Squire, the other of a London barrister. They are educated and accomplished; one, particularly, is a musician, and an extraordinary singer and actor. But the whole matter is so revolting that it should be dealt with by a secret tribunal; yet the detailed description of a ball given to these wretches at a "family hotel" in the Strand, the "Exeter Hall," and the "love letters" written to one of them, are sent in the columns of the Times into every family of the higher and lower classes. An excuse for telling the Speaker that there were strangers in the House the other night, has been given to the Times by a member. It was to mark the sense of members of the Parliament of the way in which they have been treated. He says:

"We have been flooded with papers of the most indecent and improper description—papers only fit for Holywell-street in its worst days, and quite unsuitable to be left about in any respectable family. The Lord worked M. G. on returning from his labors, perhaps at 2 o'clock in the morning, finds it his duty before retiring to read necessarily so dainty pamphlets and papers which are utterly unsuitable, from their disgusting details, to be left about."

And these papers, it must be said, come mostly from Ladies' Societies and Ladies' Committees, to which, possibly, the member's wife and daughters belong. It is all very absurd, and would be comical if it were not disgusting. Mr. GILPIN has given notice that on an early day he will move

"That, in the opinion of this House, it is undesirable that it should continue in the power of any individual member to exercise the public and Press from the debates in the House by crying that there are strangers present," but the Government has promised to deal with it.

Some remarks of the Bishop of Manchester on the Contagious Diseases act, at a meeting of the Sanitary Association, seem to me so pointed that I think they may be considered by American legislators:

"He said it did not require a great deal of medical knowledge to know that diseases of the lungs, which were credited with twenty one-third of the mortality in Manchester, had been engrafted to be permanent more than any other way through syphilitic taint. Looking at this fact in connection with vaccination, the question naturally suggested itself, was the great benefit vaccine lymph was often so largely tainted with this poisonous factor that parents dared not trust their children to be vaccinated, even to prevent them against small-pox. It seemed to him there was a case made out for enquiry, thoroughly investigated, as to how far the moral question, and that the moral question, must be dealt with by an overpowering sanitary law. If these measures of civil and social evils connected with these acts, simply legislating could remove them, he, on the other hand, if there were no hope in natural laws, which had been ordained before the creation of mankind, life through all the grades of society, obtaining the assistance from its very source of Almighty, of moralized persons who had come to a conviction that with the sacred mystery of sin which had been the cause of their birth, (an evil which some people supposed to be the opposite pole of the moral world) there was a case made out for the nation in some legislative mode, making inquiry into the subject, in order to see whether the plague might not be stayed."

LATEST HORRORS.

What horrors next? may well ask the amazed reader. The murder of an entire family of seven persons by a vagabond convict, just let loose from Millbank Prison, gives a sense of positive relief; there are things so much worse than mere murder. But why should a ruffian, capable of killing seven persons, father, mother and five children, for a little miserable plunder—a suit of clothes, a cheap watch and some poor trinkets—be let loose upon society, any more than one of the tigers of the Zoological Gardens? Why suffer human beasts of prey, the brutal savages we breed among us and educate to crime, to be at large? This maniac will now be hanged, and so rid of; but if he had been shut up and made to earn his bread, a whole family would have escaped butchery. The murders by the Greek brigands have brought forth a loud cry of "Look at home." People cannot forget the murders hired to be committed by BROADWOOD in Sheffield, who was not only shielded from prosecution, but as a sort of local hero. They cannot forget that trades' unionism has been, and still is, as murderous in England as Ribbonism in Ireland; that Greek and Italian brigands are not more disagreeable or dangerous than English garroters.

THE EDUCATION DIFFICULTY.

There is no end to the education difficulty. On Wednesday four deputations interviewed Mr. GLADSTONE on the subject. One of them was composed of nonconformist members of Parliament. They urged that all religious formularies except the Bible should be excluded from rate-paid schools, but that the Bible should be read and explained. Mr. GLADSTONE asked them how they would meet the case of the Roman Catholics. They had as good a right to object to pay for teaching other religions than their own as anybody. Mr. BAINS said it was a very difficult question, and the Government must settle it. They marched into the Prime Minister's rooms in Downing-street, Dr. JOHNSON and the Wesleyans, who protested against the local board having power to exclude the Bible, followed by the Earl of SHAFTESBURY and the masters of the public schools, and Mr. MENDELLA with clergymen and dissenting ministers. And the poor, wearied Prime Minister had to listen to all their speeches, and answer them. It seems that Mr. FORSTER's bill, even with his amendments, does not in the least satisfy the League. Its chief organ declares that

"The Government have determined to fight the Liberal Party on the Education question. Backed up by Tories and Roman Catholics, Mr. GLADSTONE and his colleagues have delivered their ultimatum in a form which every public assembly of the people, fairly convened, has already condemned."

The Liberals, who have raised Mr. GLADSTONE to power, it is said, will oppose the bill, and try to defeat it they cannot amend it. Passed in its present shape it would be worse than useless—a curse to the country. This is pretty strong language, but there is something stronger behind it.

MONADNOCK.

"PROPHETIC DISRAELI."

What the Author of "Lothair" Will Prove in a Forthcoming Work.

From Blackwood's Magazine for June.

It is unnecessary to point out to those who remember the singular theories broached in Mr. DISRAELI's former novels that the adventures of Lothair can scarcely be expected to end with the present third volume. It will easily be anticipated that a sequel still more remarkable than the commencement of that nobleman's history is in progress—in fact we may whisper that the same assistants have been secured for the future as for the present work—namely, the writer of the Drury Lane pantomimes, a gentleman on the staff of the Court Journal, and a celebrated mad-doctor who is in the habit of making copious notes of the conversation of his patients. Nothing whatever is said in Lothair about the pre-eminence of the Jewish race, which formed so prominent a feature in a former work. In that preceding novel it was shown that most of the illustrious people at that time existing were of Hebrew blood. But a whole generation of celebrities has sprung into distinction since. Mr. DISRAELI is not a man who abandons his ideas, and it still remains for him to do justice to those whom he used formerly to glorify. Accordingly, in the continuation of Lothair a great many eminent persons of this time, such as Count Bismarck, President Lopez, Gens. Lee and Sherman, Messrs. Blondin and Leotard, Herr Joachim, Miss Patti, M. Lesseps and Mr. Fechter—will be all proved to belong to the most illustrious of the Jewish race. The terror of the French, though a Jew, can only claim affinity with an inferior tribe; and Mr. GLADSTONE, if a Jew at all, is of the posterity of Shimei who reviled David. The descent of the ROTHSCHILDS from the wealthy Israelite who supplied the materials for the golden calf is briefly but clearly traced through the money-changers who were driven out of the Temple. All this, however, is merely episodical to the continuation of Lothair's history. The struggle between the Protestant and Catholic friends of that hero for the possession of so important a proselyte which occurs in the present work is only introductory to the far more important contest which is to take place in the sequel. The sensitive and inquiring mind of Lothair has long occupied itself with the mysteries of the Jewish faith, and the chief Rabbi is now his familiar friend. The Bishop, with his chaplain and trusty archdeacon, brings a strong counter influence to work. And as when two of rival parties contest a seat in a borough, Neville is both may sometimes carry the election, so the astute Cardinal, ever on the watch, bears down at the head of his Monsignors on the devoted Lothair, who has already begun to talk of building a synagogue. The rival ecclesiastics are indefatigable in their efforts; the Rabbi endeavors to keep his pupil over night at Mirral, while the Bishop passes manna on Lothair at breakfast, and the Cardinal tries to entrap him into eating ham-and-wiches at lunch. A domestic circumstance renders the triple contest more exciting, for at this juncture the Cyclopean of the Realm is in contest of twice, twice, twice! he shall be heralded in a matter which is rightly judged to be of immense importance. The Bishop is perpetually dodging about the nursery, followed by his chaplain, leaving a portable confessional behind him. The Monsignors defeat his dodges by spending a scandalous report that he and the chaplain are trying to make Lothair a member of the Jewish Church, reproaches. On the seventh night after the birth the Cardinal sends Lothair in great agitation, and makes the most astonishing revelation. He has discovered in the family archives absolute proof that Lothair's grandfather, who is buried in the cloisters, bore, was his (the Cardinal's) father, and that, therefore, he was a Jew of the purest and noblest blood. Not only does the ex-secular prelate abandon his attempt to convert Lothair to Romanism, but he announces his own intention to embrace the religion of Moses, declaring it only till he can go to Rome and try to bring the Pope over with him. The Pontiff, however, decides the wavering Lothair, in spite of the tears and entreaties of the Lady Corisande. The next morning the twins, to the great disgust of the Bishop and the Duke's family, are duly admitted into the Hebrew community with all due ceremonies, and receive the names of Moses and Aaron. Both are circumcised, and after their grandmother's death, Moses, Tussaud Lothair, as he grows up, shows

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

ALASKA AND ITS RESOURCES. By WILLIAM H. DALL, Director of the Scientific Corps of the late Western Union Telegraph expedition. Boston: LEE & SHEPARD. 1870.

MR. DALL'S object, as set forth in his introduction, has been to "comprise in a small compass" the most valuable part of the present knowledge of Alaska. The valuable part must clearly have grown on his hands, since the volume before us is one of the most portly of the season. We cannot, however, regret that this has been the call; the work is lucidly, interestingly and most welcome. Our newest possession is to most Americans literally a terra incognita. Mr. DALL has undertaken to make it clear, and very creditably has he fulfilled his task. He possesses in the first place the most trustworthy foundation for a work of the kind, namely, personal experience. He has spent three years on the spot, and has been in the enjoyment during that time of exceptional advantages for gaining the information he now dispenses. Mr. DALL succeeded Mr. KENNICOTT as director of the Western Union Telegraph expedition, and also acted for a time as surgeon in general charge of the district between Behring Strait and the Yukon. His work is divided into two principal sections, the first being assigned to travels on the Yukon and in the Yukon territory, and the second to the geography, history, inhabitants and resources of Alaska. The volume seems to have been prepared with great care, very many authorities having been studied and collated, and the illustrations are numerous and remarkably good. In addition to the main divisions, an appendix is added, containing a glossary, an account of the population of Alaska, statistics of its fur trade, meteorology, vegetabilities, natural history, &c., all of which are useful, and some extremely interesting. Mr. DALL is to be congratulated on the production of a monograph, which at this time, is of especial attractiveness, and one whose future utility cannot easily be overestimated.

THE VICAR OF BULLHAMPTON. A Novel. By ANTHONY TROLLOPE. New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS. 1870.

Without the redeeming interest which in Mr. TROLLOPE'S former works enabled us to bear with the length of his descriptions, we have in the present one less spirit and incident, and, if possible, more tediousness. Infinite in number are the small touches used to paint the portraits, which, when finished, are barely worth looking at; and manifold are the details concerning events about which he one has the least concern. When a heroine is unmistakably selfish, and a hero—albeit fairly honorable—is yet one with whom the reader has little sympathy, it is difficult to get up real enthusiasm about the story. Mary Lowther is represented as being high bred and high minded, and yet her treatment of Mr. Gilmore, and even of Walter, whom she is supposed to love, is neither disinterested nor elevated. Mr. Fenwick is a fine specimen of an enlightened Christian pastor; a faithful monitor in word, a firm self-denying friend in deed, he makes amends for much that is wearisome and more that is commonplace in his surroundings. His wife is one of those tiresome persons about whom it seems to be charitable to say, "she means well." When Mr. TROLLOPE deals with rural life, his sketches assume new individuality; the people live before us and their hearts are laid bare with a few skillful strokes. The picture is sometimes harsh, and the elements of the composition unpleasing, but this is compensated by the stern though sad reality with which they are presented. The old miller, with his sturdy rectitude, his masculine morality, and his intense suffering under the shame inflicted by his children, is a fine study from nature, and worthy of unequivocal praise. The effect of the narrative is not remarkably cheerful, and we do not think on the whole that The Vicar of Bullhampton will materially add to the reputation of its author.

LEAVES FROM AUSTRALIAN FORESTS. By HENRY KENDALL. Melbourne: GEORGE ROBERTSON. 1870.

Coming from the antipodes as it does, and for us, at least, almost the very herald in the van of Australian verse,—this book is noteworthy, if not welcome. Our main objection to Mr. KENDALL is, that he is not antipodal enough. His defects are not those of the fledgling poets of young countries—uncouthness, want of literary tact, or of culture, or reading. On the contrary, in accuracy, smoothness, and refinement, Mr. KENDALL is rather above the average of English versifiers, and has read, if anything, a little too much. On the other hand he has no uncommon degree of the fine perception of nature, or the responsiveness to outward impressions, which are, or should be, the especial virtue of those who write amid the freshness of a new world. All his Australian touches are masters of artifice, not spontaneous, but plainly put in for the sake of local coloring. The Kamtschatka touches would have been as many and as good if the author had chanced to write from Kamtschatka.

Mr. KENDALL has a good ear and often writes verse well; but his originality is trammeled. His mimetic instinct is too strong for his good. Briefly, he is a very honest and pretty constant plagiarist in style. "Olympus" is pure TENNYSON-and-water; "At Dusk," one of his best songs, bears "The Letter L" branded all over it. But his favorite master appears in the following passages, which at the same time are quite as good as the book's average. Here is one, "Campaspe," p. 26:

"Turn from the ways of this woman I Campaspe
We call her by name
She is fairest of the fire—she is brighter than brightness of flame.
Ass song that strikes swift to the heart is the beat of the blood of the South,
And a laughing and a leap and a smart, is the play of her perilous mouth."

Does that recall anything? Or this, from "September in Australia," p. 9?

"Far out in the bitter, fierce frost of the sea
I stand and remember
Dead things that were brothers and sisters of thee,
Resplendent September!
The sea, when it blows at the fall of the moon,
And beats on the beaches,
Is filled with a tender and tremulous tune
That touches and teaches
The stories of Youth, or the burden of Time,
And the death of Devotion,
Come back with the wind, and are themes of the rhyme
In the waves of the ocean."

This last might be worse, for all its mannerism, and much better and truer from mannerism in the next verse:

"We, having a secret to others unknown,
In the cool mountain recess,
May whisper together September, alone,
Of our loves and our losses.
One word for her beauty, and she for the grace
She gave to the hours,
And then we may kiss her, and suffer her face
To rest with the flowers."

This is as good as Mr. KENDALL usually does—and this (p. 65) as bad—in the way still of imitation:

"Hear now the less how fleet Telegunna,
The brass-clad hunter, first took oar and smote
Swift seaward-going seas, with face direct
For narrowing channels, and the crowfold coasts
Full Odiadand the dense hyperboreans."

That is enough to make fond Atalanta in Calydon and her "the narrowing Symplegades Whitten the Straits of Propontis with foam."

PEACH CULTURE. By JAMES ALEXANDER FULTON. Illustrated. New-York: ORANGE JUDD & CO.

The season of the fruit to which poets have love to compare a maiden's cheek is slow in hand, and few there be who are not interested in the fact. Its produce of our orchards better deserved to be called a universal favorite, for, as Mr. FULTON says, it is so easily raised, comes into bearing so soon, and is as handsome as well as beautiful, it is impossible that it should be otherwise. The growth of peach culture is something greater than some people suppose. It is said that there are individual planters who have 400 acres devoted to this single fruit, and that there are individuals who have set as many as 20,000 trees in a single season. Mr. FULTON explains the origin of his volume as follows:

"Living in the very center of the peach-growing district, observing the common mistakes in the subject, deeply impressed with the importance to the individual planters themselves, and also to the community at large; and believing that we could do a lasting benefit to both, have induced us to prepare, and now offer to the public, the following little treatise on peach culture."

Mr. FULTON has produced on this basis a volume of considerable merit, and one that contains not a few good hints. He thinks peach-growers are imposed upon easily by both railway companies and consignees, and, if this is the case, it is well that public attention should have been directed to the facts.

THE CAGED LION. A Novel. By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE. New-York: D. APPLETON & CO. 1870.

It is evident that Miss YONGE has thoroughly studied the sources whence she has drawn materials for the construction of what we may term her narrative drama. She pleads guilty to slight anachronisms, which, however, are not important, and has embellished her historical outline with not improbable fiction. A cultivated taste and a chastened habit of thought are brought to bear upon the educational aspect of feudal times and manners, as well as their prejudices and peculiarities, and the representations of those evidences of varied interest in the consolidation of events, and the portrayal of characters, honor, virtue and profound religious faith, are the chief attributes of the book, which is little more than an instrument in the hands of writers, while the fair Huguenotte seems to have had the pulling in common with him—that of devotion to a conventional life. The only exception to which, which had so much attracted her, the late Kings—Henry of England and Francis of France—Charlemagne, leave and loyal to duty, disappear, only have, as Miss YONGE draws them, all the attributes of kingly personality, and the vices of real monarchs. The scene is Guillaumi, whence the monkish WHITTINGTON, meaning, is eminently green, but the best character in the book is undoubtedly that to which Miss YONGE describes, with much power and feeling, the death of the English King. The book gives little of the romantic which adorns the romance of the middle ages, but it also avoids any traces of the immorality which frequently disfigures it.

FIRST SERIES OF BUTLER'S POETICAL SKETCHES. By FRANCIS BUTLER, author of "The Spanish Teacher," "French Speaker," "Reading, Training, Management and Discipline," &c. New-York: FRANCIS BUTLER, No. 4 Peckslip. New-York, and sold by all Booksellers.

Mr. WALT WHITMAN, if we are not mistaken, sent his first POEM over the roof of an omnibus which he was engaged to drive,—a sorry substitute for the car of Apollo. Now, Mr. DONELSY before him proved that the Lyric fire might glow under the plush of a foot-man. We are therefore not to dismiss Mr. BUTLER too hastily, because obvious fate has made him a dog-fancier. Fate cannot quench the divine afflatus; the Muse will make herself heard in the cellar as well as in the attic. Mr. BUTLER'S linguistic attainments are suggested on his title pages, and there is no reason in the nature of things why, because he is a good dog-breeder, he should be a bad poet. And indeed Mr. BUTLER shows a nicer ear for rhythm, and at times a greater regard for sense, than many more pretentious bards. Naturally, his best efforts are reserved for the objects of his life-long care, and we shall quote his "Epitaph on a King Charles Spaniel, the property of Dr. ELLIOTT—Oeyes omis est!" as a good specimen of his powers. The Latin is a little doubtful—perhaps it is dog-Latin—but the sentiment is right:

"Legal descendant of a regal sire,
One passing tear I crave;
One tender tribute only I desire,
Tread softly—I am grave.
Only a dog! 'tis true—but whom is the sin
Who never betrayed his trust?
Only a dog! what-sliped dare or can
Revile my sleeping dust?
My wasted form lies chill beneath the ground,
But here my troubles cease;
Let terror strike, when the last trump shall sound,
I'll still sleep on in peace."

Few poets know as much of dogs as Mr. BUTLER, and not many dog-fanciers, we are sure, could write so good poetry.

BENEATH THE WHEELS. A Romance. By the author of "Gilbert Lance." New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS. 1870.

Strange vicissitudes and violent catastrophes, such as occur only at rare intervals in the history of mankind, will not alone at the present day for the absence of that intellectual vigor and artistic characterization which alone can make a sensation novel endurable. In the present case the story opens very well, and the characters of Madeline and Mr. Lawton promise to awaken interest. But as we proceed the narrative becomes sadly involved; murders, mysteries and abductions are so inextricably mixed up as are the parties in the long calendar of crimes and blunders which every page discloses; and the facility with which the extremes of society are made to meet together, with the easy intercourse established between Dukes, Earls and burglars, shows an ignorance of the world's ways scarcely pardonable in a novelist. Miss SILVERSNUT'S mission in life appears to be to breed dissension and trouble wherever she goes; and the pity we feel for her misfortune gives way to impatience at her folly. The horrors of some of the scenes produce little effect, because we feel no concern for the fate of any of the actors in this badly-constructed drama, and only experience a sense of relief when they are all finally disposed of.

ALBOIN AND ROSAMOND, AND LESSIE POEMS. By ROBERT FARRON ROBERT, U. S. N. Philadelphia. 1870.

There is an air of piety and good will about these verses which will to many readers atone for the absence of other qualities we naturally look for in poetry. Mr. RODNEY may have mistaken the best of his genius, but he is so evidently sincere in the error that we cannot and it in our hearts to quarrel with him. There are, however, certain things about the volume which in some future edition we should be glad to find changed. An "stolated brow," or a "wind-beaded shore," or an "ortive sun," would hardly convey to the average reader so vivid an idea as they seem to present to Mr. RODNEY'S mind. "Convervoid grou," again, is a trifle technical for poetry, and "carpet cauliens" a verb with which we are unacquainted. We are not sure, either, that the bold Iceberg, strictly speaking can be said to "walk over the sea in silence," and prejudiced people will be sure to find fault with such expressions as "storms show thy prey," or "as though the dogs hist to each other," hist being used as a quadrupedal, which is to us at least an unfamiliar formation. So long as poetry can be made consistent with grammar it is just as well to respect these prejudices. A sailor, too, should know better than to make "sail" rhyme with "gunwale." Attention to these details will, we sure, add to the pleasure of Mr. RODNEY'S readers without at all impairing the beauty, if possibly, the freshness of his style.

GUILTY OR NOT GUILTY—THE TRUE STORY OF MANHATTAN WELL. New-York: CARLETON. 1870.

The author of this book sets out with the intention of supplying what Mr. FAY'S Norman Leslie failed to do, to give namely, a true account of "the fearful tragedy of Manhattan Well." We cannot see that any good purpose has been served in reviving so ghastly a story, and the utter failure of the author to invest its main circumstances with the slightest degree of human interest, or to shed on them the slightest ray of rational explanation, is great sufficient that it had better have been left untold. The book is mainly concerned with scenes and incidents perfectly irrelevant to the tragedy at the close. The style never rises above the level of a school-girl's essay, the sentiments are equally commonplace, and the perception of character is even more impossible than magic to expected from a young lady still in her teens. Without ability, purpose or value, Guilty or Not Guilty must rank as a very perfect sample of the modern facility for mere book-making.

QUEEN HORTENSE. An Historical Novel. By L. MUHLBACH. Translated from the German by CHARLES GOLDMAN. New-York: D. APPLETON & CO. 1870.

This is the latest reproduction from LOUISA MUHLBACH'S series of historical sketches. Why these books should be called novels it is not very easy to understand. The present volume, in common with most of those that have preceded it, deals neither with fictitious characters nor incidents. It is merely a very readable compilation from contemporary memoirs of the main circumstances in the life of the beautiful and unfortunate Queen of Holland, the step-daughter of the First NAPOLEON and the mother of the Third. The most casual reader can scarcely fail to obtain a smattering of historical knowledge from a book like the present, and the perusal may probably give [illegible] to comprehend more thoroughly the stirring times and prominent characters it refers. It cannot help thinking that the author has shown the chief value of her Muhlbach studies, which are very remarkable for the absence of gaudy colors in the works of art.

BEYOND THE SEAS. By GEORGE CUPPLES. Boston: HORACE B. FULLER. 1870.

A book for boys, of the good old type, containing a recital of the stirring adventures of an intrepid young Scotchman who ran off to sea. The nautical experiences herein detailed occur chiefly in the course of a voyage from Liverpool to San Francisco, and are related in a way that leaves little to be desired on the score either of freshness or vigor.

EVE LEAVES. By MARY REBER ANTHONY. Philadelphia: J. B. LIPPINCOTT & CO. 1870.

These verses are smoothly written, and bear throughout the impress of a devout and earnest spirit. They are less imaginative than TENNYSON or SHELLEY, but they will please a great many people to whom SHELLEY and TENNYSON would be only vanity and vexation of spirit. The book is handsomely printed, and will make an admirable reward of merit for advanced Sunday-school classes.

THE NEW DOMINION.

The Mineral and Other Natural Resources of Canada—Lumber, Copper, Lead, Silver, Gold, Iron, Coal, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TORONTO, Saturday, June 4, 1870.

The natural wealth and resources of Canada are truly immense, but it will be a long time ere they are developed to an appreciable extent. Beginning with the forest produce, we have an apparent industry showing itself in our timber trade to the value of between ten and fifteen millions of dollars annually. The duties on lumber exported from Canada to the United States last year amounted to nearly a million and a half. Besides this, immense quantities of hewn timber were shipped to Europe, the value of which it would not be easy to ascertain. The principal lumber and timber district is on the Ottawa River, but there is much cut in other parts of the country. Some thirty thousand persons are employed in the lumber business, distributed over seven Territories within the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. There is also a business done in the manufacture of potash to the value of a million dollars yearly. The value of the Canadian forest industry is therefore very considerable and largely on the increase, notwithstanding the heavy duty imposed by the United States upon lumber exported thither from Canada. There is little fear of any decrease in the timber trade for a long time, as the area of the Territories set apart is so extensive. The waste of timber in some sections has been very great indeed, but legislative enactments have been successful of late years in putting a stop to the recklessness at one time evinced. The Government, too, have interposed by means of stringent regulations in the settlement of the wild lands, certain reservations of timber being made in them as they are taken up.

COPPER, LEAD AND SILVER.

Our mineral resources, however, are much greater than those of the forest; in fact they are illimitable, but comparatively little has been done to turn them to advantage. It is well known that the most extensive copper, lead and silver region in North America lies along the north or Canadian shore of Lake Superior, commencing at Bruce Mines, at the mouth of the Ste. Marie River, and ending on Thunder Bay, a distance of over 600 miles. At Bruce Mines copper is obtained in great abundance, the mines being regularly worked by an English company. There are some other locations along the lake, but none of them extensive. On Thunder Bay there are three or four mines in operation, one of them yielding an unusually large percentage. The progress of mining operations was very much retarded by the Ontario Government placing a royalty upon the produce of the silver mines; that has since been abolished, and the mines are now more successfully worked. At Hull, near Ottawa City, there is a bed of iron ore estimated at 200,000,000 of tons; the Crosby bed, on the Rideau Canal, is 200 feet in thickness, and it is calculated would give employment to the whole mining population of Great Britain for an hundred years. At Madoc an iron mine has been worked for many years on a bed said to contain one hundred millions of tons; there are two other beds in the same township of nearly like dimensions. The aggregate quantity of ore at the respective mines is estimated at one thousand millions of tons. Other deposits have been found, and it is believed that the supply of the ore is inexhaustible. Lead has been discovered in the county of Lanark, where it yields about eighty per cent. The mine has not been successfully worked for some reason or other, although the ore is so abundant. There is lead in other sections of Canada, but it does not appear to be profitable to work for it. The production of copper has been much greater than of iron, owing to the vigor with which operations have been carried on at Bruce Mines. The aggregate production of the three mines there is nearly 3,000 tons per annum. The two principal mines in the Province of Quebec have produced several thousands of tons, and there is every prospect that the yield will continue good. The success of the Acton Mine has been unparalleled. Within the past few years silver mining has been carried on somewhat extensively near Fort William, at the head of Lake Superior. The Montreal Company have been the most successful, for in addition to operating the mine which they first opened, they have discovered a far richer deposit at Cape Thunder, which is likely to prove very profitable. So far as the operations in this new mine have gone, they show that it is more productive than all the other mines put together; large pieces of the ore in its perfect purity have been taken out, and the Company have made it a point to conceal its actual richness.

GOLD.

The presence of gold among Canadian mineral productions is not so extensive as was at first supposed, or as designing persons represented with the view of deceiving the public; there are, nevertheless, considerable deposits of the precious metal scattered through the Dominion. The Chaudiere and Madoc Mines have almost ceased to yield any returns, and Nova Scotia is the only section to which we can look for the production of gold for the present. Some years since, unprincipled speculators created an excitement in the country by representing that gold was plentiful in the township of Madoc, and it was not long before thousands flocked to the scene. The imposture was kept up for a short time, but when the bubble burst the rain was great—so many had invested their money in purchasing gold mining [illegible] which turned out to be worthless. [illegible] Government [illegible] to act [illegible] called gold discovered and the [illegible] poor fellows have faith in the yield of which was almost entirely imaginative. The [illegible] gold deposits in Madoc cannot be denied, but they are in such small quantities that all who have had anything to do with them know it would never pay to work them. The representations, however, were of such a character as to induce the belief that the gold yields of California and Australia were completely thrown into the shade. In Nova Scotia there is a better show of the auriferous deposit, and gold-mining is prosecuted in some parts of that Province with fair prospect of success.

COAL.

Coal is found only in Nova Scotia, and there it is productive in the highest degree. Under the new tariff which affords it the protection of fifty cents per ton, it is expected that a fresh impetus will be given to coal mining in Canada. A single mine has produced eighty thousand tons annually. It is estimated that the coal product of Nova Scotia is amply sufficient to meet all demands for centuries to come. Peat has recently been discovered in Ontario and Quebec. In the latter Province there is an area of sixteen hundred square miles of the very richest peat beds, a portion of which is now being worked by a company. There is a large tract at present being worked by two companies between Port Colborne and Welland, and bordering on the Welland Canal. Part of it has been worked for two years, and large quantities of the peat sent to the Western States. The making of peat is likely to prove a valuable branch of industry in this country. Coal oil, as it is well known, abounds in the western portion of Ontario, and its production would, by this time, have been the most extensive of all our mineral industries, had it not been that an unfortunate collapse was brought about—as it was said—by the Fenian raid of 1866, which threw back operations and caused an almost total ruin. The coal business is now recovering from the terrible effect of that disaster, and gradually assuming greater importance; speculation is by no means so rife as formerly; and it is evident that confidence is being restored in the way that is certain to render the coal business safer than it was before. The yield before the collapse occurred was very large—in fact, greater than the demand by a great deal, and even now it is very considerable, several refineries being kept constantly in operation.

LACK OF ENERGY AND ENTERPRISE.

The mineral wealth of Canada will never be properly developed until more energy and enterprise are manifested in connection therewith than at present. There can be no good reason for the apathy so apparent in mining matters along the north shore of Lake Superior. To be sure capital is the great requisite, and without it nothing can be done; but it is evident that was not so much wanted as courage and enterprise to go on with the work, for various companies have been organized but those which never struck a stroke. Bad management has been the main cause of the failure to develop the vast mining districts with which the country abounds, and the so-called money supposed to be evinced has proved to be a by-word and reproach. The mining portions of the country have, in fact, been made to have proved but a field for speculation rarely if ever equaled, and it is to be regretted that so little advantage has been taken of the opportunities offered to reveal their riches. Were the spirit of American enterprise infused into those who in Canada are of a speculative turn of mind, and always ready to catch at anything that will bring them immediate profit, the lake coast of Algoma would soon resound with the din of busy industry, and the mines on the north side of Lake Superior would be brought into competition with those on the south. But there is a lack of the needful spirit which is so essential to the successful opening up of the buried treasures with which the whole Northwest abounds. Astonishing as it may seem to many, the salt wells at Goderich are now being extensively operated, and there is a prospect of certain success. The richness of the brine is believed to be unparalleled, and the great purity of the salt has caused it to be much sought after. There is no question that the making of salt in Canada promises to become a lucrative business.

SOCIAL SCIENCE.

The Convention of the Western Association in Chicago—Interesting Papers on Interesting Discussions—Idiocy in the United States—Popular Corruption.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

CHICAGO, Thursday, June 9, 1870.

The Western Social Science Association met at Farwell Hall yesterday morning. The attendance was not large, but quite a number of scientific men were present. The irrepressible Secretary, Rev. FRED. WILKE, of Springfield, was on hand, filled to the brim with all sorts of thoughts upon this great subject of social science, which has evidently taken entire possession of him. The President, G. E. BROCKWAY, of Detroit, being absent, Rev. ROBERT COLLYER, of this city, was called to the chair. The first paper read was written by E. C. WILKE, D. D., of New-York, on "Prison Reform; its Present Position and Outlook in the United States." The paper was able and carefully prepared—historical, statistical and suggestive.

IDIOCY IN THE COUNTRY.

Dr. WILBUR, Superintendent of the State establishment at Jacksonville for idiots and feeble-minded children, followed with a paper on "Idiocy," in which he discussed the means of training and educating idiots. He gave some statistics. An examination in Massachusetts showed one idiot in 656 inhabitants; in Connecticut, one in 800; in Ohio, one in 820; in Illinois, one to about 1,000. He considered that no improvement could be hoped for under the old system, but with proper care it was possible to make good citizens of many. He concluded the discussion by stating that there was in this country one idiot to one thousand people; that they were generally ill-treated; that they could be improved, but, if neglected, they deteriorated; that they should be brought together in schools; that the State paid no more when they were taken out of almshouses and put in an institution; that no asylum had ever been abandoned, and that they would be soon established everywhere. It was the duty of society to meet idiocy, which was a form of social evil, and the principles given would meet the case. In the first place, however, the public mind had to be awakened to the importance of the subject, the causes of idiocy, and the fact that no social condition was exempt from it. Society, too, needed be informed of what had been done for idiots, and that their condition could be ameliorated at a reasonable expense.

GOLDWIN SMITH ON ENGLISH POLITICS.

In the evening, GOLDWIN SMITH read a paper on the "Present Political Crisis in England." There was a large audience present, Farwell Hall being pretty well filled. And never was there a heavier draft upon the patience and politeness of a Chicago audience than there has been this evening. Mr. SMITH, being accustomed to address classes, has not cultivated his elocutionary or lung power; and besides, his voice is "thick;" he could not therefore be heard with sufficient distinctness to keep the thread of his discourse by more than a third of those present. But they sat still and respectful for an hour and a half, and those who could hear and understand applauded the good points he made. And then the address itself was a mere affair, being mainly historical—what every intelligent person is familiar with—and a very imperfect analysis of the British political system, with some philosophical reflections upon it. For my part, I was sorry I went, and regret that I cannot retain in my mind the imagined GOLDWIN SMITH, who was so true a friend of our glorious Union during the dark days of the rebellion. Yet, there was nothing objectionable in the address; the sentiments were all good, and expressed in the best kind of English; they were the sentiments of a liberal mind, even to the extent of favoring universal suffrage as the basis of a political system. But, somehow or other, expectation was not realized; hence a feeling of disappointment.

PAPERS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS.

During the session of yesterday, several other papers were read. W. H. CRUNKLEMAN, Esq., of Indianapolis, read a very excellent paper on the "Air We Breathe." It was a scientific and valuable discussion of a subject important to all. Rev. Dr. FOXE, of St. Louis, occupied a couple of hours in discussing "Bishop the Institute of Social Science;" and the Rev. [illegible] read a paper on "Social Science and the Church." Hieroglyphics [illegible] course, [illegible] the [illegible] of population, the [illegible] of the people, and other topics. A paper by Hon. ISAAC MCKENDLY, of Indiana, about "The Great Debate," which he conceived to be popular corruption, occasioned a long discussion, in which quite a number of gentlemen participated, and the McFarland case was ventilated once more.

DEAF MUTES.

Miss CORNELIA TRUE elaborated the subject of the "Articulate Instruction of Deaf Mutes," arguing the possibility of so educating this unfortunate class as to enable them to speak with considerable distinctness. It was shown that great success has attended the efforts which have been made in this direction at the Illinois Deaf and Dumb Asylum at Jacksonville. This paper also called out a discussion. Some other questions were discussed, considered, and altogether the Convention is conducted a pleasant ful and profitable—in some respects—affair.

GEORGIA.

Crop Prospects—Corn Men and Cotton Men—Wheat and Clover—The Cotton Being Plain.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

ATLANTA, Ga., Saturday, June 4, 1870.

The copious rains of the past week or ten days have revived the drooping spirits of the farmers, as well as the drooping stalks of the cotton and corn crops. The rains have been general throughout the State, and have been abundant. The most confirmed croakers are forced to admit that we have had "the genuine" (a common form of expression which denotes a fall of rain during every time.) The only crop which was injured by the drought beyond cure was the oats. In many places this had begun to head before the rain, and where this was the case the yield will necessarily be quite small. The cotton is as strong, healthy and promising as could be wished. It is small for the time of year, owing to the backwardness of the Spring, but the "stand" is excellent, and with a few days' fine sunny weather, to enable the hands to destroy the grass and weeds, which the rains have invigorated, and to thin the cotton sufficiently, the prospect of a good cotton crop will then far be very encouraging. If the rains had been delayed much longer, it could not have written so hopefully. Very much of the cotton planted in the latter part of April, upon which the rains of last week were the first that fell since the seed was put in the ground, had not come up at all until the rain, and in many places where the crop was well up and had been chopped over the first time, an abundance of young cotton has come up, rendering it necessary to repeat the chopping process and thus increasing the labor.

STANDING OF CORN.

Corn—what there is of it—looks well, but is small for the time of year. Unfortunately, there is too little corn to be seen. Travel where you will, you see field upon field, patch upon patch, fenced upon corner, in cotton, and only here and there a field of corn, looking like a stepchild among a numerous "second family." Better farmers have planted very little corn, or they have planned in very scattered and inaccessible spots. I am compelled to believe that the latter is the case, because, in my large acquaintance among the farmers, I have not seen one who, when asked if he had planted any corn, did not promptly and indignantly reply, "Yes, Sir, a plenty to do me." I have asked a few of them, when looking at their cotton, to let me take a look at their corn,—that I am a corn man, and have a passionate fondness for a full corn-crib,—but almost invariably I have been told that it was too far, or too hot, or too wet, or there was not time to "go away yonder to the far end of the place to see the corn." I was assured, however, that "away yonder" the corn was flourishing, and though obliged to appear satisfied, felt a good deal like St. Thomas. I wanted to touch the corn. I wished to convert "away yonder" into "right here," but I could not, and therefore have a lurking fear that the area planted in Indian corn, or what the botanists call Zea Mays, is lamentably circumscribed, and when the planters pretend that they have planted "a plenty to do them," they are only trying by a foolish deception to conceal what they feel to be an act of folly. Dissimulation is the homage which vice pays to virtue. In this case it is empty homage, and will so prove when their cribs are measured this Fall, and their wretched mules and horses are exhibited this Winter.

THOSE WHO DO PLANT CORN.

There are, I am happy to say, some exceptions—a few planters who really have planted "a plenty of corn," and who have no difficulty in showing it, whose mules and horses and oxen are sleek and fat, whose cribs are even now comfortably full, and who can truthfully boast that they have never bought a bushel of corn in their lives. On the places of these men I have seen fine fields of wheat and oats, preparations already made for a large root crop, a number of fine, lazy-looking, sleek and well-kept hogs enjoying themselves in "the lot;" and these men, strange to say, are the only men who have a surplus of money. They did not make as much cotton as their neighbors. Their income "on paper" was much smaller, but the cotton men have sold all their cotton, spent the money, have not a dime now, and are in debt to their factors for advances for the purchase of fertilizers, corn, meat and hay. The plenty-of-corn men who have the wheat, oats and hogs, have all their cotton money; they did not owe a cent; did not buy or go in debt for fertilizers, corn, meat or hay; and if a bad year comes, or low prices for cotton, they have "a little something to go upon," while the cotton men must assuredly go where the woodbine twineth, as the pastoral FIELD, Jr., facetiously remarked.

WHEAT AND CLOVER.

The wheat crop is unusually promising. All the accounts I have received or have read from the grain districts of the State agree in representing the wheat as an abundant yield and entirely free from rust, blight and mildew. Oats, as already stated, will be below the average yield. I have heard of a few planters who have been eminently successful this year in raising clover. It has been thought, until recently, and very many persist in thinking still, that clover cannot be grown at the South—that the land does not suit, or that the climate is unfavorable. Modern improvements and the necessity for a diversified agriculture have, however, exploded this fallacy, and it is now fully demonstrated that clover, and plenty of it, can be raised in Georgia. Hon. BENJAMIN C. YARBY, President of the State Agricultural Society, has, I learn, raised a fine crop on a large scale—over a hundred acres—on his plantation, on the Ocmulgee River, Alabama, and Dr. JAYNES, of Green County, has also succeeded on the inferior land, proving farther that it will grow in the shade, and thus furnish woodland pasture. When the example of these gentlemen has been generally followed,—as it may with profit and abundant success,—then planters will find out how they can restore their exhausted lands and raise large crops without buying so many tons of the patent self-acting fertilizers, which now poison the atmosphere in every direction with their confusion of bad smells.

THE COMING STATE FAIR.

The preparations for the State Fair to be held here in October are progressing rapidly under intelligent direction and liberal expenditure. The premium list of the Society amounts to 22-[illegible] thousand dollars, and in addition to this, several public-spirited citizens have offered large prizes for special articles. QUONDAM.

Murders in Georgia—Proclamations by Gov. Bullock.

From the Atlanta Intelligencer, June 2.

In our advertising columns today, will be found several proclamations, by Gov. BULLOCK, offering rewards for parties charged with crimes, and who have fled from justice.

The first on the list is BENJAMIN WARE, charged with the murder of CHARLES BREEWOOD, in Jasper County, on the 24 of December, 1869, for whose apprehension and delivery a reward of $200 is offered.

2. GEORGE WHITSEY, charged with the murder of MARCY E. WHITSELL, in Gwinnett County, in the month of November, 1869, for whose apprehension and delivery a reward of $500 is offered.

3. ALEXANDER H. EVANS, charged with the murder of JESSE MUNN, in Taliaferro County, on the 19th March, 1870, for whose apprehension and delivery a reward of $500 is offered.

A few more unknown persons who recently, in the County of Jefferson, took an elderly white and an old colored man from their homes at night and beat them in a most brutal and murderous manner. The ruffians were disguised at the time, and from some cause the evil authorities in the immediate neighborhood where the outrage was committed, have failed to take any steps toward the arrest of the perpetrators thereof, for whose apprehension and delivery a reward of $500 is offered.

5. JACK EATS, charged with the murder of JERRY SIMMONS, a person of color, and WM. MCCULLOUGH and WM. J. CARR, charged with the murder of ALBERT DALE, a person of color in the County of Decatur, for whose apprehension and delivery a reward of $500 each is offered. There is a good chance for detectives to make money, and we trust they will be active and vigilant in bringing the parties to justice, so that condign punishment may be meted out to the guilty parties.

CURRENT NOTES.

The Boston Post gives constant evidence of constitutional inability and ghost-seeing in editorizing.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. STEBBINS, of Missouri, who were married a short time ago, and were each twenty-two years of age, died within a few minutes of each other, a few days since.

A Minnesota School Board have voted lightning-rods dangerous, because they attract lightning, and ordered one of the outlines in their charge.

Judge E. R. SLOANE, of Sandusky, positively declines to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Ninth District of Ohio.

Hon. E. C. MARSHALL, of Woodford, Ky., has announced that he shall run for Congress in the Seventh District of that State, in opposition to any and all nominees of conventions.

The Pittsburg (Penn.) Gazette thinks it certain that Congressmen MORRELL ARMSTRONG, SCOFIELD, BEGLEY and GILFILLAN, of that State, will be renominated.

A Rhode Island paper is very severe upon a mean man in that State. It says that he would take his grandmother's coffin to slide down hill on.

Baltimore has painted its garbage carts a bright blue, with the running gear and shafts red, and had a grand procession of them through the principal streets a day or two ago.

Cincinnati is aghast at the discovery that a drunken clerk of a druggist has frequently compounded the medicines prescribed by one of the city physicians for the poor of his district.

In this State, on the same day last week, a lady, her daughter and her grandchild were buried. The elderly lady had lived in one town, and her daughter and infant in another.

The Springfield (Mass.) Republican says that among those who enjoyed the musical festival in that city, last week, was the invalid artist BIZWELL, who ventured out for the first time in ten years, and drank his fill of musical delights.

Among the photographs exhibited at the National Convention of Photographers in Cleveland was one of the Detroit Post, every letter of which, we are told, was as plain as the printed copy. What a waste!

The Boston Advertiser reports that WILLIAM BRAKENRIDGE and WALTER SCOTT appear as parties to actions on the docket of the Supreme Judicial Court of York County, Me., and that FRANCIS BACON is counsel in both cases.

A call has been published in Pennsylvania for an informal Convention of active Republicans from all the minority counties in the State, to meet in Philadelphia on the 6th of July for consultation and co-operation.

A Texas paper asserts that the bitterest Radical in the Legislature of that State is an Ex-Confederate General who went to Brazil at the close of the war because he would not live under the hated Government of the Yankees. He is wiser now than he was at the close of the war.

A Pennsylvania paper, recording the marriage of a gallant ex-soldier, says that he gave an arm in defense of his country, and now gains two for the remainder of his life. "Thrice is he armed who" had "his quarrel just." We trust his warfare is o'er.

Some white gentlemen who took seats in the colored men's car on a Georgia Railroad, the other day, were invited to another car by the conductor, as the two colored passengers objected to white gentlemen sitting and smoking in their car.

A Montreal paper announced on Thursday last that Prince ARTHUR would finally leave that city on Tuesday morning, 14th inst., and added the appalling announcement that he would give dinners every night till then. May good digestion, &c.

The Richmond State Journal asserts that it has not seen a single newspaper in Virginia, or outside of it, Conservative, Republican, independent or neutral, that has not condemned the act of the three Commissioners in STARTING certificates of election to the Conservative candidates for municipal offices in Richmond.

In several counties in Maryland inmates of alms-houses who are disorderly or refuse to obey the rules may be punished by flogging, the number of stripes authorized in one county being thirty-nine. In another county the number is limited to ten, and in others to fifteen, twenty and twenty-five.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES

Slaughter Holidays—A Model Police Master—Arrest of Penal Thieves—Minor Offenses and Accidents.

One JOHN MILLER, being in search of a railroad ticket to Pittsburg, on Saturday met one CHARLES WEBSTER who took him to No. 182 Broadway, where he introduced him to Robert Brown at the same time whispering to Brown that Miller was the man who could furnish him with the ticket. But this scent being of a persuasive and sporting disposition, invigled MILLER into the gambling saloon No. 8 Bowery, and proposed a game of faro as a preparative for his journey. MILLER declined but had no objection to sit down and watch Brown's game with the tiger, which beast was so much too strong for him that he lost, or seemed to lose, his watch and a large sum of money. MILLER thought it was time to go and intimated as much, but Brown and his party then interfered to prevent his departure and claimed that he should make good the loss of the player. The men were threatening to throw MILLER down and rifle his pockets from the floor, when Officer Mulvey, one of them six sovereigns in English gold, and was then permitted to leave. Getting to the street he called on officers and had Brown arrested. That adroit operator being arraigned before Police Dowling yesterday, stated that he is a resident of No. 68 Chambers-street, which fact he was committed in default of $5,000 bail for trial on a charge of robbery.

The returns from the Seventh Precinct Station, day morning, signed by Sergeant E. BUCKMAN, contained the following accounts of an affair occurring in the Precinct: "At about 2 o'clock A. M., HENRY KEARNEY, aged forty-two, residing at No. 128 Mulberry-street, was found in a shanty accidentally had his left eye knocked out by Mrs. HILLIE O'NEAL, who resides in the same house, caused by a family quarrel or fight. KEARNEY's eye was dressed by Surgeon JAMES and sent home. No arrest, but will be the morning Prisoner." This very elaborate account of the affair having stimulated inquiry, it was learned that the fight took place in the house in which where both parties live, and although the forcible extraction of KEARNEY's eye, which was torn completely from the head and fell upon the floor, may not have been the precise result intended by the infuriated woman, the fact is not generally regarded by the Police as an accident. The street which was the scene of the affair at the time, and the assailant is held to answer. The injured man who was taken to his room, instead of his eye, as officially stated, is not in any danger of a fatal result, but is of course maimed for life.

Through the exertions of Superintendent JOURDAN, and Capts. HEDGES, MOUNT and Enright, the penal thieves have lately had a hard time of it. JAMES WILLIAMS, alias "Bourbon Johnny," who is the chief and most dangerous because most secret and persistent of the specimens, was arrested on the charge of grand larceny in relation from the mercantile firm. He has been driven out of the Fifteenth and Seventh Precincts, and at last seeking refuge in the Twenty-ninth, was arrested Saturday night by Capt. BURNS, with his associates, DEBORAH WILLIAMS, JENNIE MILLER, ROBERT BROWN and GEORGIANA WAY, alias Emma Hodgens, at No. 4 Forsyth-street, Chinatown. The prisoners were arraigned yesterday morning before Justice Ottt, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, and although no special crime could be alleged against them, they were committed in default of $1,500 bail each, as suspicious characters. Have had been previously taken before Superintendent JOURDAN, that the officer told Bourbon Johnny that he might as well abandon his profession, as it was determined to compel him to select some other style of stealing, if steal he must.

HENRY HANDY and HENRY SALES, it is alleged, on Saturday, called on Mrs. HANNAH LEE, of No. 410 West Twenty-sixth-street, and on the plea of representing himself to be a Deputy Sheriff demanded $30 as still due on her property. Mrs. LEE then went out to get an explanation of the matter from the parties from whom she had bought it, and during her absence they carried it away. Being arrested yesterday, before Justice DOWLING, at the Tombs, they were committed on a charge of grand larceny.

J. RODIER, was arraigned yesterday before Justice DOWLING, at the Tombs Police Court, on a charge of larceny, it being alleged that having hired a furnished room of Mrs. HANNAH LEE, of No. 412 West Twenty-sixth-street, he had left suddenly, taking the carpet in the room with him. He was committed for trial.

The body of a drowned man which had apparently been in the water for some time was found yesterday morning in the North River, foot of One Hundred and Forty-second-street, and secured by the Police. The Coroner was notified. The body of another drowned man was found by the Harbor Police, under Pier No. 31 North River, and secured for inquest. The remains have not been identified in either of these cases.

A fire occurred at 2 o'clock yesterday morning in the office of T. P. WHITEVILLE, in One Hundred and Twenty-third-street, between Third and Fourth avenues, but was extinguished before much damage was done. Another fire from which also little damage ensued occurred at 1:10 A. M., in the apartment of CATHARINE FARRIS, at No. 216 Williams-street, caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp. The loss is covered by a policy in the Manhattan Insurance Company.

ALFRED WARREN, who has been ascertained to be a resident of Newburg or Poughkeepsie, yesterday fell down stairs in a fit at No. 231 West-street, and soon died from the injuries. An inquest was held and a verdict of accidental death rendered.

Examination of the Hebrew Free Schools.

Steinway Hall was well filled yesterday morning, the occasion being the annual examination of the Hebrew Free Schools of this City. Several hundred scholars were present. Mr. ABRAHAM OETTINGER presided, and Mr. J. S. ISAACS acted as Secretary. Among the assemblage were Rev. J. T. LYON, of the Nineteenth-street Synagogue; Mr. M. M. ALLEN, Rev. Dr. BERDY, editor of the Hebrew Leader, and Rev. Dr. HAIN, of the Clinton-street Synagogue. The exercises commenced with a prayer by the pupils, who presented a very attractive appearance. Recitations and dialogues of a varied and entertaining character were delivered by Anna Stalitz, Isla Clarence, Mary Silber, Ruva Cohen, M. Rose, J. Blan, Henry Ettlinger and Samuel Oettinger. Two Hebrew poems were also read by Gustav Kurts and Mary Wolf, and received with the utmost. The examination of the scholars was continued for some time. It was conducted by the teachers of the different classes, including Mr. Harrison's class in School No. 3, Mr. Eppinger's classes in Schools Nos. 1 and 4, Mr. Vande Walker's class in School No. 2, Miss Harris' class in School No. 1, Mr. Koch's class in Schools Nos. 1 and 3, Miss Gorlitz's class in School No. 1, Mr. Moses Cohen's classes in Schools Nos. 1 and 2, and Mr. Joseph Cohen's class, in School No. 4. The scholars displayed considerable proficiency in regard to their knowledge of the Hebrew language and of the primary branches of English education. Some of their number excelled in translating passages from Hebrew of scripture into English, and in answering questions on religious subjects. Addresses were made by Aldermen HENRY WOLF, MAX ONA, one of the patrons of the schools, and Mr. A. OETTINGER, mentioning the present encouraging and useful condition of the schools. The concluding exercises consisted of the distribution of a prize to about fifty meritorious pupils, followed by a prayer by Mr. J. G. MOOT, Principal of School No. 1.

The schools, four in number, were established five years were by several prominent gentlemen belonging to the Hebrew Free School Association, principally for the purpose of giving instruction to the children of poor persons in the Hebrew language and religion. About 1,800 children have been educated at them since their commencement. They are situated as follows: Two in Avenue C, one at the Greene-street Synagogue, and one in Twenty-seventh-street, near Third-avenue.

German Steam-boat Excursions.

Five different excursion parties of Germans, of this City, started on board of barges, attached to steam-boats, forming quite a flotilla, from the foot of Broome-street, on the East River, yesterday morning. Some of them sailed for Staten Island and some went up the Hudson River. Among the excursionists were the Germania singing society, Upland Bund, the barge Mazeppa, attached to the steam-boat Pope Cotton, that made a trip up the Hudson River as far as Hastings, then went back and landed at Sandy Side, between Guttenberg and Pleasant Valley, N. J., there rested for some time and then returned to the City in the same order. The party was a large one, being composed of the members of the Society and their families, and a number of lady and gentleman friends, and among the large members of two other German singing societies of this City. There was a band of music aboard, and dancing, singing and general hilarity were the order of the day.

Sabbath-School Labor and Responsibility.

"Sabbath-School Responsibility and Labor" was the subject of a sermon by Rev. Dr. HODGE, at the Temple, corner of Henry and Oliver-streets, yesterday. The reverend gentleman took for his text the sixth to the ninth verse, inclusive, of the sixth chapter of Deuteronomy: "And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart. And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children." &c. The Bible, said the doctor, was placed in our hands by God for our edification and enlightenment. It is our armor, and will give us the victory in the conflict with the adversary. In our time many assaults are made on the Bible, not only by avowed infidels, but by its professed friends, who seem unwilling to recognize the distinctive doctrines of the word have been given to tampering with it; but its teachings have never been successfully resisted nor gainsaid. Its influence permeates our free institutions, and gives them stability. Science and art flourish alongside of the Bible, and commerce is encouraged. In the Sabbath-school the teaching of these truths are novel in the fourth of the young, which are to bring forth an abundant harvest unto righteousness. And, continued he, Sabbath-school labor demands loyal to our earnest and respectful attention. Let us pray for the conversion of the children of the church. The preacher then eloquently dilated on the special condition of Christian liberality in this immediate vicinity, saying that gulfstream were gradually to world of ranks of other, to be the future question of polygamy and the plurality of wives. He concluded by exhorting to those present to engage in Sabbath-school labor, and especially to encourage and support the school attached to the church.

EVANGELIZING MEXICO.

Mid-Week Meeting at St. Paul's M. E. Church—Interesting Addresses.

Rev. Dr. BUTLER, Secretary of the American and Foreign Christian Union, addressed the congregation of St. Paul's M. E. Church, Fourth-avenue, yesterday morning, on the subject of missionary labor in Mexico and the rapid growth of Protestantism there. He said it was a matter of great world had been asked for reasons to what part of the world under the sway of Roman Catholicism God would first commence the work of return. No one would have selected Mexico, and yet this was now the place above all others where the work was most necessary. What was supposed to be lost, was, in the Providence of God, lost. In view of what we had witnessed in the past history of Mexico it would naturally be asked, "Can any good come out of such a Nazareth as that?" Bishop KINGSLEY had told us that there was not in the wide world such a strong condition of Romanism as in Mexico. It was common then to see a priest officiate at a funeral with a cigar in his mouth or the Sabbath, and upwards of a week fight in the City of 200 years Mexico was under the exclusive rule of the Roman Catholic religion, the convulsed all vessels from her ports, except Spanish. No foreigner was permitted to come into the country. Even as late as 1834 Baron HUMBOLDT, who had spent years in Mexico in the prosecution of his great work, the Cosmos, was compelled to enter the country on the written request of the Crown of Spain. It was only within the last four years that marriage was made a civil contract there, and the ceremony was exacted by the priests for performing the ceremony practically compelling the people of the country from legally entering the marriage state. In a time the people of Mexico are so far behind hand in human progress that we look upon them with surprise and even with contempt, and yet Romanism has made them what they are. But the darkness is greatest just before the dawn of day. We would prove the best man with Mexico. Nearly one-half of the real estate of that country had been taken possession of by the Catholic Church, and retained in its hands until the last five years, thus enabling the Church to bring the balance of power and control the political destinies of the nation. Thus bringing in the MAXIMILIAN was a period in Protestantism, and it was then that he fell Protestantism had its first opportunity. Only twenty-five years ago the first Bible was taken into Mexico for the people. Until that time the people were wholly destitute of the Word of God. During the war of 1847 the American Bible Society sent a Bible to Mexico by the soldiers and colporteurs, and a library of Bibles and Testaments, and they have worked as natives among the people. They have been the means of leading many, including some of the Roman Catholic clergy, to the Lord Jesus. It was only since the withdrawal of the French troops, and the conversion that these Bibles could be sent out in Mexico. It was in view of this that the speaker said that the world would have the first real home of a stable government for that country. The man now at the head of the Mexican Government are trying to guide Mexico in the way of Protestantism, and they are willing to do this if it was necessary to adopt the Protestant measures in the Church. The Church property has sold to raise funds for free public instruction. The result will be that in future we shall hear less of government oppressing them as we have in years past. They have discovered that civil and religious liberty must go hand in hand. They sent two years ago, to this City for a man to go there and help on the work. The speaker said "their friend and help on the work" was now the place above all others in the person of a son of a retired merchant of this City, who was born in South America, and spoke the Spanish language, and was heartily devoted to the work of spreading the Word of God. He had now lived in Mexico fourteen months, and was present here today. Without detaining the audience any further he would introduce to them Mr. HENRY C. WRIGHT.

Mr. WRIGHT then addressed the congregation, giving an account of the rapid change that was going on in Mexico in the religious habits and convictions of the people. He related many anecdotes of the conversion of Romanists, both clergy and lay people, to Protestantism. He said that what the Bible had done for the United States it would yet do for Mexico. There was a little band there working as the Christians would have to give the Bible to her people. He spoke of the time when the Roman Catholic Churches in and around the City of Mexico, many of which had been turned into stables and devoted to other secular uses. The great Cathedral of Mexico now belongs to the Evangelical Church. The Bible thought of the United States had found its way there, and a party is being formed that "longs for liberty, both religious and civil. The Roman Church was no longer a political power there. Those of the Bishops who were not banished left of their own accord when the liberal Constitution of 1857 was proclaimed. They appealed to the Pope, and he persuaded NAPOLEON to send MAXIMILIAN and the Zouaves to restore their ancient sway; and they were conquered, and with the aid of our own Government were driven out of the land. The speaker said when he arrived in the capital of Mexico there were three Evangelical missions there. When he left, after a residence of fourteen months, twenty-eight Evangelical congregations had been established, and two Evangelical periodicals were printed. A great reformation was going on even among the priests, among whom were many noble and sincere Christians. They had encouraged him to go on with the good work. He left the last priest who officiated at the Cathedral sound to him that he was entirely with him in the work he was doing.

As the conclusion of Mr. WRIGHT's remarks, a collection was taken up in aid of the Mexican Missions.

Rev. Dr. Frothingham on the Death of Mr. Dickens.

At the morning services at Lyric Hall, yesterday, Rev. Dr. FROTHINGHAM, at the close of his discourse, made a brief allusion to the death of the late CHARLES DICKENS. Two continents, he said, were in mourning for a "great and good man gone." It is not often that whole nations weep for the demise of an author; but here there is bereavement, because our house hold author is dead. The death of DICKENS falls like a pall upon the world of letters, and sorrow is universal; but on the strength of the grand conceptions of the great author shall be cherished and that will be while time lasts; so long will the name and the memory of CHARLES DICKENS be honored and revered, both in the Old and the New Worlds. DICKENS was an artist, though he did not call himself one—he illustrated the parables. He was not, technically, a preacher; yet what a preacher of doctrine ever had such an auditory! He was a magician of the heart. He made us all God's charity children. Whose friend was he not? And who is not his friend?

The reverend doctor then made an apt and beautiful allusion to the influence of DICKENS' works upon the masses of mankind, and closed by saying that the great author was the friend as well as the teacher of human kind.

Rev. Dr. Chapin on the Death of Mr. Dickens.

Rev. Dr. E. H. CHAPIN, during the delivery of a very eloquent discourse at his church on Fifth-avenue, yesterday, alluded briefly to the late CHARLES DICKENS. He said that many persons would perhaps say, What, speak of a novelist on the Sabbath day, and in the house of God! If it were a great statesman or military hero that had died, it might be permissible to allude to him from the pulpit on the sacred day; but that a mere writer of fiction should be spoken of and extolled, no, that would not do. Some people might be shocked at what he was going to say, but he thought it right and proper, and he did not believe that he was travelling out of the way or out of his line of duty in alluding to the death of CHARLES DICKENS. Since the time when the influence of the divine Author of our nature and Redeemer had gone a thrill through not only this country, but the civilized world, there had been no death which had caused such a sensation and produced such sorrow. And what was the reason? It was because his power and influence had been not for evil, but for good, in all homes. Wherever the English language is read and appreciated. His great power on naturalness, he pointing out the duties of every-day life, was acknowledged. It was true that he had the sense of the humorous so fully developed in him that others he caused his readers to laugh, but often, too, he drew tears from out the hearts of men and women by stirring tears that came from the heart, nurtured by the highest and holiest impulses which can operate on man. When by depicting, as he so well knew how to do, some great human wrong, caused by some great human wrong, the feelings thus stirred must necessarily cause one to sympathize and more fully instructed to ward the great griefs of the human family; to make one feel more charitable and more loving. The speaker took the ground that Mr. DICKENS was a hero; that he had done a great, yea, even a Christian work. The influence which he had exerted and was yet to exert upon literature, and even upon Christian preaching, could perhaps never be adequately estimated, but it was great. Before Christianity, he said, it was not possible that there could have been a CHARLES DICKENS. For truth, justice and humanity he had labored well, faithfully, effectually. He believed that God had been such beings as men of genius, but they were few and sometimes a long way between. Men of talent, men of learning, men of great capacity for developing the resources of earth, had lived in all ages—are living now—but we could not call them men of genius in the sense of the word. Mr. DICKENS was a man of genius that to call CHAS. DICKENS a man of genius would be no blasphemy. In concluding his reverend friend said that if there were not, as many would claim, a Divine inspiration, a future world for the soul, then the revelation and development of such power of mind, and of such a genius as that of Mr. DICKENS, must have been for naught. But he should be slower with to believe that. Jesus taught that when the body dies an eternal life commences. Dickens was well known of all of our people, he was the small world of earth, and it will be recognized in another state. In making some remarks in regard to a future world, the reverend gentleman said people seemed to have very different views of what the nature of the employment in Heaven. Some imagined it to be a place where the pleasures of the senses would be the same as those which would exist in all their perfection; that they would spend eternal years amid gold, smell all sweet perfumes, partake of all luscious fruits, and listen to, and engage in singing songs the most melodious. Others thought Heaven was rather a negative sort of a place, total and perpetuation of all kinds, would be realized. The speaker did not subscribe to such theories. He believed the mind, the immortal soul, when breaking away from its clay-like cases in this world, would go on making new discoveries, receiving new truths, and that what is known here as sublimely glorious will dwarf the unknown.

Mr. Beecher on "Human Affections and Divine Mercies."

At Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, yesterday, before an unusually large congregation, Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER preached on "Human Affections and Divine Mercies," selecting for his text the first chapter of the First Epistle of Peter, ninth and seventh verses—"Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations, &c. The reverend gentleman explained that these verses recognized that though a Christian had many joys and exhilarations in his career, he was subject to occasional disappointments and heaviness, "through manifold temptations," but that experiences belonged to the very life of piety, and was the process by which the spiritual in man gained a complete ascendency over the flesh. He said that the trials and afflictions should not be regarded as evidences of God's anger, but rather as messages of mercy for the correction of certain evils, for whom "He loved He chastened and scourged."

Last evening Rev. Mr. BEECHER delivered a discourse on carnivial pleasures, and the danger of yielding each to the pleasure. He alluded to temptations which constantly beset this class of the community, and to the guilt-reception which they met in the churches, and said that under these circumstances, deprived of home influences as the great majority of them were, it was no wonder if considered that young men fell into temptation. He referred to the example which many merchants are young men, that of drinking with them, and asserted that if the merchants of Broadway and Wall-street would set their faces against this practice of indulgence during business hours, instead of compensating the clerks for greatly advanced thereby. He asserted that if a vote could be gathered, covering a period of ten years, showing the number of young men who had been ruined and gone to their graves through social genius in carnivial pleasures, the result would be something appalling.

The reverend gentleman made no allusion to the death of Mr. DICKENS.

Friendly Society of St. Ambrose.

Yesterday morning a collection was taken up in St. Ambrose Church for the benefit of the Friendly Society of St. Ambrose. During the services Rev. Mr. BILL, Rector of the Church, said that the Society, which had been incorporated by the State, extended its aid to all persons of the Protestant faith, without regard to sex, color or nationality. The Society had already done a great deal of good, and its usefulness was constantly extending. No one was sent away by the Society unaided, provided they came well recommended and the means of the society permitted relief to be extended. An annual payment of $5 constituted any one a member of the Society. Subscriptions might be sent to Mr. BAILEY, the Treasurer, No. 1 Spruce-street, or to the Almoner, Rev. Mr. BILL, No. 35 Vandam-street.

MONDAY, June 13—A. M.

There was a moderate general Trade in all departments of Merchandise last week, but a better movement on the Grain Exchange in the line of Exports to foreign markets as well as for the home trade. There is decided activity, also, in Petroleum, the production and export of which are both on the increase. A contemporary says that it is conceded that the production at the wells has increased a thousand barrels per day as compared with last season, and the increase is still progressive. The Cotton Exports of the week from this and the Southern ports fell off to 32,000 bales, nearly three thousand bales from the corresponding week last year. The excess to the present date of the crop year, however, is 654,000 bales, and the excess of receipts, 730,000 bales. The whole crop, including corrections for overland receipts at the Eastern mills, and 90,000 bales estimated for Southern consumption manufactured at the place of growth, is now expected, according to the Financial Chronicle, to exceed 3,300,000 bales. The accounts of the new plant continue favorable from nearly all the Cotton States. The Grain receipts at the Lake ports are looking up, and the recent general recovery in the price of Wheat and the appearance of some rather liberal export orders are especially encouraging for the Western trade and for the Western Railway traffic.

The Money and Stock markets during the week were easy for the latter, and not uniformly active for Stocks or Gold, and the ultimate prices on Saturday afternoon show a decline of 1 ⅌ cent. on Gold, ½@¾ ⅌ cent. on the Public Funds, and, with some exceptions, a lower range on the Railway speculation. The new Bonds of Tennessee and the Shares of the Pacific Mail, both now speculated in as non-dividend "fancies," were higher than the week before.

According to the Treasury figures communicated to the Washington agent of the Associated Press on Saturday last, the Treasury holds Gold coin as follows, compared with the close of May, or as on the 1st of June Schedule of the Public Debt:

	June 1.	June 11.
Total on hand	$102,795,722	$100,284,631
Net depositories	$2,304,000	$2,307,000
In Government custody	$71,285,122	$70,010,631

The Currency balances are now $20,721,004, as against $14,343,817 at the beginning of the month. The Currency balances at New-York alone, $11,616,645, against $6,741,516 at the close of May. The New-York Banks now hold $60,189,170 in Greenbacks, against $61,618,670 at the close of May. The Internal Revenues collected since June 1 amount to $5,620,085, making for the fiscal year to date $170,102,087. The Customs thus far in June are about $6,000,000 of all the ports.

We compile from Report No. 6 (new series) of the Bureau of Statistics at Washington, the following summary of the Exports of Domestic Produce from the United States for the first eight months of the current Fiscal Year, as compared with the corresponding period in the Fiscal Year 1869. Of the six staple Exports, which we present in separate lines, it will be noticed that there is a large gain on Cotton, Tobacco and Breadstuffs, a moderate gain on Petroleum and Provisions, and a falling off in Lumber and Wooden Wares of about 15 ⅌ cent. The average gain on all Exports is about 30 ⅌ cent in Currency values, and forty ⅌ cent. as reduced to Gold values. The increase in Foreign Imports, marketed or consumed in the United States, for the same eight months, is a fraction less than 9 ⅌ cent.:

COMPARISON WITH PREVIOUS YEAR—EIGHT MONTHS.

	1870. July 1 to Feb. 28.	1869. July 1 to Feb. 28.
Goods for consumption	$271,825,329	$240,675,651

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

At a meeting of Conservative members of Parliament, it was resolved to support the Government in carrying the Compulsory Education bill. Lord DERBY, it is said, will no longer oppose the Irish Land bill, and will seek to make only such changes as will make it acceptable to the House of Lords....A London weekly paper publishes a rumor that the Marquis of BUTE is about to abjure Roman Catholicism....A reward of $1,000 sterling has been offered by the new West India Telegraph Company for the detection of the author of the story announcing the loss of the Dacia....During an election riot in the Isle of Wight, on Saturday, many people were injured and much property destroyed....The races at Longchamps for the grand prize of Paris, took place yesterday, in the presence of the Imperial family. Several English and other foreign horses entered, but the prize was won by the French filly Sornette. After the race, a crowd gathered about the grand stand and cheered the Emperor, the Empress and the Prince Imperial....The debate on the monarchy was continued on Saturday in the Spanish Cortes without result. It is announced that, early this week, M. CASTELAR will bring forward a proposition for the complete and immediate abolition of slavery, with indemnity to the present owners....The correspondence between Italy and Switzerland, regarding the movement on the border, has assumed a milder tone. A descent on Italy from Austrian territory by Italians is threatened, and the Austrian Government is taking measures to prevent it....The Greek brigands whom the Government troops have been pursuing, have escaped to Turkish territory....It is reported that the Turks are sheltering and aiding the Christians who were burned out by the great fire in Constantinople, and that large sums have been subscribed for the aid of the sufferers by people irrespective of sect....A reduction in the military establishment of Bavaria is proposed.

THE INDIANS.

Senator MORRILL, of Maine, and Mr. HOOPER, delegate from Utah, called upon the Sioux Chief RED CLOUD, on Saturday evening, to pay their respects. Mr. MORRILL assured the Chief of their sympathy—that Congress, the President, and the people, would deal justly with the Indians. He was convinced they had been too much neglected and abused, and assured RED CLOUD that if he were to go North he would find multitudes of friends. In the course of his reply, RED CLOUD said, in relation to Fort Fetterman, that it was a curse to his people, and brought nothing but mischief into his country by whisky drinking, abusing of squaws and other bad work. He hoped there would be no war, and there would be none, if the whites waited for the Sioux to begin it. Mr. HOOPER spoke of the good conduct of RED CLOUD and his people toward the Mormons, who had not lost a life, an animal, or a bale of goods until the railroad was built. RED CLOUD said the Mormons had always dealt fairly with his people. RED CLOUD and his party leave for New-York today, where they are to remain a day or two. On Saturday a "council" was held at the Indian Bureau between the Secretary of the Interior, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and RED CLOUD. The Secretary assured the Chief that the traders he preferred should be appointed, and that, at RED CLOUD and his band were unwilling to go on the reservation, and wished to live on the head-waters of the Big Cheyenne, it would be as they desired, and the Government would give them cattle and food and clothing. RED CLOUD, in the course of his reply, said he was mad when his head-chief was in the treaty, but the Secretary having explained it again, he (RED CLOUD) was pleased. A later dispatch says that the visit of RED CLOUD to New-York is postponed, the Chief desiring another interview with the authorities.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, on Saturday, the bill appropriating $50,000 for the expenses of the Indian delegations now at Washington, was passed. The bill granting lands to the Central Branch Union Pacific Railroad was called up, and a protracted debate ensued, from which it was made to appear that a tract of land three hundred miles long and fifty miles wide was granted to two railroads, one taking the odd sections and the other taking the even sections. The morning hour expired during the debate, but the Franking bill was laid aside to dispose of the pending bill. The measure occupied the rest of the session, and was passed by 32 to 12, when the Senate, at 6¼ P. M., adjourned.

In the House Mr. BUTLER asked leave to report from the Judiciary Committee a bill repealing the Tenure of Office act; objection was made. The assailant of Mr. FORNEY, of Virginia, was brought before the bar of the House in the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms. After some debate the prisoner, WOODS alias DOOLEY, was remitted to the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms, and a resolution directing that, owing to his inability to employ counsel, the Speaker employ suitable counsel for him, was referred to the Judiciary Committee. The House then resumed the consideration of the Senate amendments to the Appropriation bill. After a good deal of discussion the amendments, placing female employés in the departments on the same footing as males, was adopted; those appropriating money to meet the expenses of an expedition to the North Pole, raising the salaries of Supreme Court Judges, and providing for the extension of the Capitol Grounds, were rejected; and then the bill and amendments were referred to a Conference Committee. Mr. LOGAN, from the Conference Committee on the Army Bill, reported a reconstructed measure, the provisions of which are given in our regular report of the proceedings elsewhere. This conference report was agreed to, and then, at 6¼, the House adjourned to Monday at 11 A. M.

GENERAL.

Advices from Rio Janeiro to the 23d ult. represent that Gen. PARANHOS, the Brazilian Commissioner, has returned to Asuncion, where a treaty of peace with Paraguay had been signed. The Entre Rios and Uruguay revolutionary movement continued.

The coopers of Philadelphia are on a strike. Several co-operative establishments were burned during the week, and yesterday morning a large but unfinished barrel factory was burned. One man has been committed for trial for arson.

A San Francisco dispatch announces the wreck of the steamer Active, from Victoria for San Francisco, twenty-two miles south of Cape Mendocino, in a fog. The passengers, with part of the baggage, were saved, but the vessel is a total loss.

A fire in Lewiston, Me., yesterday morning destroyed property valued at from $60,000 to $75,000. The property destroyed is known as Central Block.

The Cuban privateer Hornet, under seizure at Wilmington, N. C., since last Fall, has been released, by order of the President, to the original purchaser from the United States, Mr. FERNANDO MACIA, who gives bonds amounting to $20,000 that she shall not engage in hostilities against Spain, or otherwise violate the Neutrality laws of the United States.

The Hudson's Bay Company, it is said, will distribute the land-scrip granted them by Canada among the proprietors.

The last detachment of troops for the Red River region reached Collingwood on Saturday.

The Vermont Constitutional Convention on Saturday rejected the proposition to give the ballot to women by a vote of 1 to 221, and adopted that for biennial sessions, instead of annual, as formerly, by a vote of 113 to 115.

A synopsis of the regular monthly report from the Bureau of Statistics is published this morning.

In the Philadelphia Court of Sessions, on Saturday GILBERT R. RODAN and MARY TULLY were brought before the Court under accusation for adultery and bigamy, RODAN having been divorced from his wife in New-York for adultery with MARY TULLY, whom he subsequently married. The Judge said the only question in the case was whether the Court should give effect to the New-York statute, and reserved decision.

WILLIAM GILMORE SIMMS, the Southern novelist, died at the residence of his son-in-law, in Charleston, S. C., on Saturday evening, aged sixty-four years.

Prodigality at the Public Expense.

Gov. BALDWIN, of Michigan, has called an extraordinary session of the Legislature to propose an amendment to the Constitution, legalizing the issues of bonds in aid of railroad projects recently made by a great many municipalities in that State, in the exercise of powers which the Supreme Court has declared unlawfully granted by the Legislature. This decision of the Court has, naturally enough, spread dismay through a large body of private investors, many of whom, doubtless, have put their little all in these town and county bonds, and if anybody has to suffer loss in the matter, it is not they, but the community at large, whose representatives caused the error. We hope, therefore, the popular vote will enable the municipalities which have issued the worthless securities to make them good; no interest but that of knavery would gain by their repudiation, while the credit of the State would suffer severely for years, if not irretrievably. Under similar circumstances the people of California manfully shouldered a burden, illegally imposed on them, thus acknowledging the soundness of the doctrine—which just now has a good deal of political value—that the moral obligations of a State are as binding, and ought to be held as sacred, as its legal obligations.

We trust this occurrence will call the attention of the public all over the country to the absolute necessity of putting a stop, by constitutional restrictions, to the growing practice on the part of towns, counties, cities, and States of voting away the property of the minority in aid of schemes, which though in one sense they may be called public improvements, are in a very great degree, if not for the most part, private enterprises—that is, enterprises resulting in private gain, and conducted for private gain. The example of Congress, in making enormous grants of waste lands, in aid of railroad building, seems to have spread through smaller corporations all over the country the wildest notions as to the rights and duties of local majorities in dealing with public funds. Scandalous as have been the jobbing and waste which have marked many of the Congressional land grants, it must not be forgotten that the grant of wild lands in aid of railroads, after all, takes nothing out of anybody's pocket at present. At worst, it puts the public domain into the hands of speculators, instead of reserving it for distribution among bona fide settlers; but then it imposes no present burden on industry, and it does open up vast regions to settlement which would otherwise not be reached by population for a generation or two. The grants of bonds and other obligations which are made by towns and counties are, however, literally mortgages imposed on persons actually settled, in the case of the minority—that is, it may be of nearly half the tax-payers—without the consent of the owners, for the purpose of promoting the construction of a road to be worked for private profit, and the conduct of which is sure to be regulated, wholly or almost wholly, with reference to private profits. The result of the extent to which the practice has been carried in many places in the West is that a great many towns are likely to lose a considerable portion of their population, the burdens imposed on property being greater than the people will bear; while in other places the inhabitants have been driven into open attempts to repudiate, or to evade even the judgments of the Courts.

The proposed new Constitution of Illinois—a State which has suffered from these practices as much as any in the Union—peremptorily forbids the State, or counties, or towns, from lending their credit, or making grants to, or taking stock in, private corporations, or making appropriations for railroads or canals. We think there can hardly be a doubt that every State in the Union will be obliged to take the same precautions before very long. The scale on which the abuse at which they are aimed may grow, even in the most respectable communities, has been well illustrated in the case of the Hartford and Erie trouble in Massachusetts, where one railroad, managed by some of the finest specimens of the tribe of modern "railroad kings," has managed, in one way or another, to get about five millions out of the State, and is in a fair way of getting three millions and a half more. As the bulk of the tax-payers everywhere are apathetic, and absorbed in their private affairs, and speculators and jobbing politicians are ever wakeful, active, and sanguine, there is positively no limit to this mode of getting money out of people's pockets. The field for "improvements" in every State is prodigious. At present the attention of speculators is confined simply to railroads and canals, but we may be sure, if some constitutional check is not put on their operations, we shall see more things done for the public good and private gain, with the aid of funds taken from the tax-payers, than we have yet dreamed of. Some idea of the possibilities of the case may be formed from the performances in times past of the New-York Common Council, limited as its sphere has been. The City Manual, for instance, has long ceased to be a compendium of useful information about the City Government, and has become a work of art, a specimen of typography, wood engraving, binding, fine writing, and in fact of general expensiveness, the one object of its construction being apparently the putting of money into it. As the knowledge of the art extends, we may be sure we shall see "State aid" invoked for schemes which nobody has as yet foreseen, unless the protection of the organic law is extended to the property of the minority, by a rigid and clear definition of the meaning of the phrase "public use." At present, Legislatures give it the widest possible application. When it first made its appearance in our jurisprudence, nobody thought of private property being wanted for public use except for public high-roads or public buildings. The idea of its being made to cover liens on people's lands and houses for the benefit of private corporations, or in aid of dividends to speculative stockholders, entered nobody's head. Everything is now "public use" which lobbyists can persuade the majority of a State Legislature to consider so. It is high time for the people to define the term rigidly in the State Constitutions, and it is safe to say that there is no danger whatever in depriving railroads of the benefits of it. At the rate at which population and production are growing in this country, there will soon be no region which is in want of a railroad which cannot get it from private enterprise, and there is hardly a railroad now in existence, or likely to come into existence, which cannot with decent management be made to pay well, or at least sufficiently well. If the State will only keep their hands off, railroads will pass more and more into the hands of business men. "State aid" only draws speculators, and involves the whole business of public transportation in jobbery and confusion.

The Story of the Indians.

Whatever differences of opinion may be entertained with reference to the claims which the Indians have upon us, the manner in which those claims have been brought to our notice during the last few days cannot fail to make a deep impression. We have heard the story of the red man from his own lips, and if we can once bring ourselves to regard it in a candid spirit, and without violent prejudices toward the Indian simply on account of his race, we shall see some reason to suppose that the "wrongs" in the Indian affair are not exclusively on our side. There can be no doubt, for instance, that RED CLOUD, a Chief over a score of tribes, never understood the true nature of the treaty of 1867 until it was properly explained to him on Friday at Washington. All the Indians declare that they were told that the treaty was only intended to "make peace"—that the troops were to be withdrawn, and the Indians allowed to "raise their children." When they found the railroad going through what they regarded as their country, they believed the Government to be once more taking an unfair advantage of them. Secretary COX told them on Saturday that he was sorry "they felt badly upon finding out what was in the treaty." But is this the way the business of a great Government should be carried on, even though the parties treated with are "only" Indians? Is it any wonder that the Indians do not adhere to treaties if they are carefully kept in the dark as to what those treaties really contain?

We are quite aware that there is a class in the country which simply settles all such questions by saying, "Any treatment is good enough for the Indians. They are vermin, and must be exterminated." We trust, however, that this savage theory is not accepted by the great body of the people. We ought to be desirous of keeping our engagements with the Indians, even if they do belong to an inferior race. The "extermination" principle has had its advocates, and some military men, as our readers will easily remember, have done their best to carry it out. But we might almost challenge any one to read RED CLOUD's speeches, and then decide whether the Indian is entitled to receive ordinary fair play or not. RED CLOUD is evidently a man of considerable natural abilities. No amount of education could have enabled him to present his case with greater effect than he has lately done, drawing all his images and illustrations from nature, talking about one-half; garden and other seeds from $[illegible] to $[illegible], hides and skins some $600,000, and living animals about $1,200,000. This list might be protracted to a great length, showing in innumerable little items that branches of production in this country which were once able to exchange profitably with foreign products, now cost so much that their products cannot be exported except in diminished quantities. Why, for instance, should the export of garden and other seeds fall off more than nine-tenths, or of India-rubber goods about one-half? The only explanation is that high taxation has so increased the expenses of production that these articles cannot compete with the foreign.

In like manner, let any candid observer examine our trade returns with countries where we formerly traded profitably. With the West Indies we have increased our purchases of their products, during the last nine years, by the amount of about $33,000,000, (gold,) while the goods we have sent to them in return have remained just about the same in value. The trade with Sweden and her colonies is equally discouraging in its returns. In nine years we have doubled our purchases, while the goods we have sent in return have fallen from $1,513,570 to $168,974. With Mexico and the Sandwich Islands the returns are very unfavorable. With Canada, in nine years, we have increased our purchases about $9,000,000, and have sold to her just about the same value of goods and products.

It must be borne in mind that this unfortunate change in our trade with foreign countries is all of recent date. It is contemporary with the tariff. From 1857 to 1860, the annual increase of exports of domestic manufactures was nearly sixteen and two-thirds per cent. From 1860 to 1869, there was a decrease. From 1857 to 1860, the export of domestic cottons increased by about seventy-eight per cent. They should have been last year some forty millions at that rate of increase; they were in fact about four and a half millions.

There can be but one inference from these facts—that our present system of taxation, customs and internal, is destroying our ability to purchase from foreign countries, by making production so costly. If we still buy, we are merely buying with borrowed money, and the results of such a mode of doing business will be fatally apparent before many years.

A New Way of Selling Books.

Of all the plans for getting circulation for the work of an unknown writer, that adopted by Mr. R. H. HORNE, the author of Orion, was perhaps the most ingenious. Mr. HORNE first thought of giving away the edition outright, but, on consideration, he altered this purpose and put a nominal price on the volume. The price fixed upon was one farthing, but the publisher was directed not to permit any one to buy more than a single copy at a time. Three editions were sold in rapid succession at this price—the singularity of the device operating, no doubt, as an admirable advertisement. What follows is more remarkable. The fourth edition was issued at a shilling, the fifth at half a crown, and these two editions were taken away almost as rapidly as the preceding three. Mr. HORNE was thus in a fair way to recover his outlay. But, unfortunately, his publisher at this juncture became bankrupt. The luckless author had advanced the needful funds to sink on the preliminary ventures, but had no settlement since his poem began to bring in a profit, and the only satisfaction accorded to the hand that penned Orion appears to have been that of being the first to sign the insolvent publisher's quittance.

It is clear that this scheme, much as it challenges admiration for its clever originality, belongs to the category of things that can be done only once. If, for example, Mr. HORNE had proceeded to put upon the market another poem at a farthing, numbers would doubtless be purchased with a view to sell again, at a profit to the booksellers, when the price came to be advanced. The contrivance of selling only one copy to each buyer would prove of little avail, since for one additional farthing a constant stream of boy-purchasers could easily be found, and the margin of profit would still remain large. Perhaps the plan of giving the buyer of each tenth or twelfth volume a handsome bonus might induce the public to buy up unsalable books. We make a present of the suggestion to unlucky authors.

The Political Future.

It is becoming a matter of interest, not only to the Democratic Party, but to its opponents, to ascertain the probable position which it will occupy in the canvass of 1872. Usually, the issues upon which Presidential contests are to be fought are substantially determined, or at least strongly foreshadowed, in the intervening State elections. At present both parties are in an exceptional position. Although each has a dim prospect as to its probable leadership, neither has a sharply defined policy.

The Republican Party has the advantage in being forced to settle current questions of legislation within its own lines, as the party in power. This will almost certainly result in the amicable formation of a policy by the time it will be absolutely needed, and the process will almost as necessarily bring out a leader. In all probability he will be some one identified with the policy, as its representative, if not its originator; and his strength will lie in the conceded desirability of completing the work inaugurated and partially executed by him. With the Democratic Party the case will be different. They have no means of developing a policy or a standard-bearer, but must create both by the negative process of mere opposition. That position has but one advantage, which is that those who occupy it can profit by Republican errors; but it remains with Congress to determine how far that advantage shall extend.

As yet, the Democratic Party are as far from having a really harmonious policy as they were in 1868. The same elements of discord among themselves exist, now as then, and there is far less open ground of opposition to the Republicans. The policy of Reconstruction, which was then debatable, is now substantially completed, and a large element of the party, formerly willing to oppose it, now concedes that it is no longer an open issue. True, the old anti-war element seems strongly inclined to cling to the issue as asserted by the Western delegates to the Tammany Convention in July, 1868. At the South the cry goes up for a "white man's government," and the Ohio Democracy at its recent Convention boldly declared its purpose to repeal the Fifteenth Amendment. But, on the other hand, there is a growing feeling in certain Democratic quarters that resistance to Reconstruction is not only useless, but impolitic. Leading organs, East and West, North and South, deprecate further opposition. The councils of the party are therefore distracted. So far as policy is concerned, the Democratic Party, like Orator Puff, has "two horses to its votes," neither of which prevails. Of course discord is the inevitable result. Whichever way the question happens to be decided, it will be apparent that mere policy and not conviction controls. The freedmen will see that they can have no affinity with the Democrats; the loyal and patriotic element will soon become disgusted with the senseless adherence to old prejudices and issues, and the party will drift into the campaign of 1872 without that harmony or enthusiasm which are essential to success.

A Shocking Squeeze.

The world is somewhat changed since the time of the Emperor AUGUSTUS, who used to complain that he could not bring a new word into his language. Nowadays the neologies come frequently into the vernacular, and take their place beside "canvas" and "skedaddle," in spite of their nonsensical appearance. We are at present threatened with the word "squeeze," which, though it has a familiar look, is yet in its application as strange and grotesque a piece of novelty as we have met with for a good while. It is, in fact, a highly archæological and artistic word of the present period, as any one may see who reads the London Athenæum and other literary periodicals of England—especially in connection with the Phœnician-lettered Moabite stone lately dug up at the east of the Dead Sea. We are told by those who describe this relic that the Enders, after examining it, took a squeeze of it—the word being set down and repeated without italics or quotation marks, as if everybody would be sure to know all about it. But the thing is certainly a sort of conundrum to the generality of readers, who try to guess at the meaning in a vague way, and suppose that to take a "squeeze" of an old stone is to cover it with soft moulder's clay, and "squeeze" this for an impression of the inscription. That would satisfy a great many; but there may be still a greater number who would never remember the French word esquisse, (a sketch,) from which, in all human probability, that barbarous little stranger has been derived. One would think the French form would be much better than such a laughable equivoque. "Squeeze," in the new sense, is rather a clumsy curiosity of literature, not very creditable to those who introduced it. It is worse, if possible, than the word vim, which has now obtained too great a hold upon popular favor even to drop out of use.

Somebody has contrived to carry off twenty thousand dollars from Gen. BRIZZAS's office in the Treasury. Great care is generally taken in showing visitors over the Department, but on this occasion the precautions were insufficient. The clerks in the office had reason to be sorry for the mishap, for they were all detained until 11 at night, and thoroughly searched before they were allowed to leave. There can be little doubt, however, that the plunder was by that time securely disposed of. Gen. BRIZZAS is not often caught "napping," but for once a couple of impudent swindlers have contrived to get the better of him.

The House, by its amendments to the pending Appropriation bills, preserves its character as the more economical branch of Congress. It discriminates in a manner which, unfortunately, the Senate seldom imitates. Thus, by adopting the equitable principle that the pay for clerical service shall be regulated by the character of the service, and the capacity of the person rendering it, irrespective of sex, the House does full justice to the female clerks, at the same time that it refuses to sanction the Senate scheme for increasing greatly the Departmental expenditures on clerical account. Again, on Saturday, the House rejected heavy items connected with the National Capital,—lending no countenance to the agitation for its removal, and none to the folly which would stifle the cry for removal by reckless outlays at Washington. The Polar expedition, or rather the appropriation for it, was also voted down. The House is on the right path. Reduced taxation should be followed by reduced expenditures.

Delaware may not be a colossal State, but its Republican citizens evidently appreciate the causes which retard its improvement. Their Convention adopted a platform which arraigns Democratic rule on the ground of corruption and extravagance, and as being responsible for a system of taxation at once unequal and oppressive. They call, too, for "a liberal and well-regulated system of public institutions," as one of the wants of the State,—declaring their preference, however, for separate schools for the newly-enfranchised class. In regard to national politics, they throw their influence on the side of liberality toward all who suffer from disabilities. They express the hope and belief that the time is near at hand "when all of the restrictions and disfranchisements imposed upon persons engaged in the rebellion may be removed without danger to the peace of society." The Republican Party throughout the country is in advance of the party in Congress on the subject of amnesty.

The New-York Democracy will probably be the happiest sufferers from the provisions of the recently-enacted Federal law to secure freedom and honesty in elections; but their brethren in other cities will suffer proportionately. Brooklyn has shown itself the rival of this City, and the Albany Evening Journal states that there, too, fraud makes itself manifest. Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Chicago and every other large city could doubtless tell the same story. Local causes have made the Democracy of New-York more daring and bodeful in their use of improper means of controlling elections, but the party everywhere is not sensitive upon that subject anywhere. Federal authority may enforce what the Democratic constituents have failed to yield.

Some of the Indian Chiefs, at any rate, are coming to New-York. RED CLOUD, according to our own correspondent, is not likely to be of the party, while another report states that he will certainly favor us with a visit. We have expressed our opinion of him on another subject. Probably there are many who call him a savage who would be glad to possess a tenth part of his abilities. Now is the time for the "interviewers" to sharpen up their pencils—and their imaginations.

Bills have been simultaneously introduced in the Senate and House, enacting that every contract for labor, any part of the consideration for which shall be free transportation from any foreign country, shall, if it extends over six months, be deemed a contract for servile labor, and the person entering it shall be punished for misdemeanor. This is aimed at the importation of Chinese laborers, a kind of business which appears likely to increase. The Chinese are relied upon by various projectors of railroad and other enterprises to undertake the rougher and more tedious work of construction which has hitherto been largely performed by emigrants of other nationalities. This being the case, it is proper that the laborers should be protected, and not become subject to a quasi condition of slavery. Under the most favorable circumstances they will be in danger of somewhat rough and harsh treatment at the hands of those whom they are intended to displace. In fact the six companies in China already feel this so distinctly that they are ceasing to encourage their countrymen to emigrate to the United States, where, they allege, they have frequently been robbed, beaten, and otherwise maltreated.

Recorder HACKETT has sent a man to prison for nine years and a half for stabbing a Police officer. The assault was an extremely cowardly one, and there was absolutely no defense for it. Even Mr. HAWK, who was engaged for the prisoner, could find nothing to say for him except that he "rendered the country service" during the war. But if every man who fought in the Rebellion were to be licensed to kill a policeman, at any moment he was in the humor, Superintendent JOURDAN would soon run short of men. Recorder HACKETT has, as usual, pronounced a very proper sentence.

The Republican State Convention of Ohio has been called to meet at Columbus, on the 10th of August, to nominate candidates for Secretary of State, Judge of the Supreme Court, Comptroller and member of the Board of Public Works. The State Central Committee recommend that the several County Conventions to elect delegates be held on the 30th of July, and urge immediate action in order to secure thorough local organization. The State election takes place on the 10th of October, which will make the campaign one of exactly two months' duration. Considering the importance of the canvass in its relations to national politics, every day of that time should be diligently improved. The Democrats are actively organizing throughout the State for a sharp contest, and will leave nothing undone to achieve success. With proper effort on the part of Republicans there ought to be no doubt whatever of success. Ohio is strongly Republican, and with good men upon the ticket the State can be carried.

Accounts from India represent the cholera as being on the increase, and the attacks are fatal in a large proportion of cases. The fact should operate as a warning to the populations of other countries. The ravages of this terrible disease have almost invariably commenced in the East, and have extended to Europe and to this country with a regularity which enables scientific men to predict their course during future visitations. Whether this Summer is to witness a recurrence of former attacks cannot of course be known. It may be, as on former occasions, that a Winter may interpose between the appearance of the epidemic in Europe and on this side. But at all events, common prudence would seem to dictate all possible sanitary and personal precautions for the care of health. The very extraordinary weather at this season is an additional reason for vigilance in warding off diseases of an epidemic or contagious character.

Ecclesiastical decentralization seems to be becoming the rule in Europe. The Slavs of Bohemia are visibly drifting away from Rome, and now the Magyars of Hungary are adding to their disenthralment at the Council aspirations after a national Church. Prof. SCHWICKER thus boldly lays down the platform in his pamphlet entitled Catholic Autonomy in Hungary:

"A system of Church government like that which is sought to establish in Hungary is a purely national affair, the national union of the Church and the State, and that, which the pale of the Church, between the clergy and the laity. No other authority, of whatever kind, has a right to interfere. This is the firm and unshaken union of all the Catholics of Hungary, and we hope that Rome will understand how it is to be appreciated and respected."

AMUSEMENTS.

Announcements for To-Night.

THE BEETHOVEN FESTIVAL.

It seems hardly necessary, after the space devoted to recording the preparations for the Beethoven Festival, to call for renewed attention to the first concert of the series to-night. Let us note, however, that the programme (printed yesterday) is an admirable one, and that the soloist—Mme. PAREPA-ROSA—and the several conductors having charge of the immense orchestra and chorus, are altogether too well known for their talent and experience to allow of any doubts as to their fitness to interpret it. The Symphony in C Minor, we are requested to state, will be commenced punctually at 8 o'clock.

OLYMPIC THEATER.

A fresh version of "The Daughter of the Regiment," together with a new miscellaneous programme, will be presented at the Olympic Theater this evening. Mrs. JAMES A. OATES and all her associates will appear in the new selections.

Miscellaneous.

YESTERDAY'S SUNDAY CONCERT.

The audience assembled to enjoy the second Sunday concert at the Grand Opera-house yesterday was very large. The performance was a thoroughly good one—as, indeed, the studied efforts of the numerous orchestra, under the baton of so skilled a chief as Mr. MAX MARETZEK would have made it. The soloists were Mr. RANDOLFI, who was in excellent voice, and quite endeared by an orchestral accompaniment; Mme. VARIAS-HOFFMANN, whose experience in the concert-room does not always conceal the wear of her organ, and the Misses children, two accomplished little vocalists, of whom the boy is a violinist of especial promise. Miss NULLY FLORIN was prevented from singing, by indisposition, and the small yacht wrecked in Revere and intended for that lady was thrust for consideration upon Mr. TILTON, the stage-manager, who announced her sudden illness. Mr. TILTON was at first quite overwhelmed by the compliment, but he gathered strength enough, after reading aloud the card dying at the vessel's stern, to state to the curious assemblage that the effloresent craft would reach the desired haven without delay.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAM-SHIP CITY OF MEXICO.

The steamship City of Mexico, from Vera Cruz and Sisal, via Havana June 7, reached this port yesterday. By the courtesy of the Purser our Havana letter, printed below, was promptly delivered at this office.

Three Different Stories About the Upton Expedition—The Truth Out—No End Yet to the War—Effect of the Rainy Season—A Queer Telegram.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Tuesday, June 7, 1870.

The anxiety about the Upton expedition has been allayed at last and the Cubans breathe freer. The Spaniards flatter themselves with the official report, and indulge in the thought that the expedition is a failure and that her entire cargo has been captured, but such is not the fact. The official report of the Captain-General states:

"The steamer Upton landed at Punta Brava. The gun-boats Eco and Tumaco, with 100 artillerists, dispersed the pirates, killing ten, among them Capt. HARRISON; two were drowned and three taken prisoners; a steam launch, rubber raft and cargo of arms, ammunition, cartridges, powder, medicine, clothing and correspondence were captured; the rest of the pirates are being pursued; they are in a bad fix and without provisions."

The naval commander tells his story a little differently in his official report. He says that the captured property consists of two tons of powder, 126,800 Spanish cartridges, 1,700 rifles, 200,000 caps, 2,800 pounds sulphur, 400 pounds saltpeter, rubber rafts, medicine-chest, surgeons' encased surgical instruments, and adds:

"The expedition was commanded by GASPAR BETANCOURT and CISNEROS. The latter has gone to Colombia to bring LONG and his expedition of two hundred Colombians, who are reported will land men near Santiago de Cuba, of which fact I have advised the Commander at that port. All the captured property is already on board of the man-of-war Boria."

Here we have already a discrepancy between the Captain-General's and the Admiral's reports; the latter fails to make the slightest mention of the steam launch, and it seems hardly probable that a naval officer would forget such a thing as the capture of an enemy's craft. But a third party appears on the scene, namely, Mr. VENDER, one of the editors of the Fin de Cuba and at present in Puerto Principe, who also has a story to tell. He improves the Admiral's official report by stating that a gun-boat discovered the landing at Punta Brava and went to Nuevitas for assistance; that the captured property consisted of 25,000 Spencer cartridges—Admiral says 126,000—six tons of powder—Admiral says two tons—ten thousand pounds sulphur—Admiral, 2,800—that the prisoners taken were immediately executed—this is undoubtedly true—and that the prisoners declared that they had been already eight days on the key—which also is true. Here we have the three narrators giving entirely different categories. The truth of the matter appears to be that the expedition landed part of her cargo at Punta Brava, and quietly left to land the rest at some other port, where it has undoubtedly been taken care of ere this. Punta Brava is about 200 miles east of Havana, on the north coast, and within an hour's sail of the town of Baracoa. The steam launch probably carried the arms and ammunition to different places in the neighborhood, and left with them only a few men to act as guards or laborers. The three Spanish reports fail to give any particulars as to the date of capture or where the men have gone to; but this we shall undoubtedly find out in a few days, when the journals will give glowing accounts of a grand battle and the killing of a "Yankee," with which title Americans have lately been honored by the Captain-General in his official reports. If the entire party has landed in the jurisdiction of Remedios, the troops of the Cinco Villas will have plenty of work before them, as they will be compelled to withdraw from the vicinity of Sancti Spiritus. Movements are also on foot to bring an expedition from Yucatan and land it in the vicinity of Santa Cruz del Sur. The arrival of 1,500 foreigners would change the aspect of the war, not so much perhaps on account of their number or prowess, but owing to the great moral influence their arrival would have on all classes. Five hundred men would, beyond a doubt, revolutionize that reported stronghold of the Spanish party, the famous tobacco-growing region of the Vuelta Abajo; and if an equal number would effect a landing near Colon, they would soon be joined by hundreds of Cubans and thousands of negroes and Chinese. Some persons are inclined to think that it is already too late, and that the revolution is subdued; but these persons read only the Havana journals, and know nothing of the real state of affairs.

WAR NEWS.

The rainy season has put a damper on military operations, and the reports of engagements are only drivelling affairs. A few Cubans killed here and there, and an occasional brush between the main forces, say divisions composed of two or three hundred men on either side, are matters of rare occurrence, and only take place in the vicinity of Puerto Principe. According to an official dispatch, Major MONTANER brought twenty-two prisoners and 180 presentadoes from the Guatmaro region to Fort Las Minas, POSCURULL's column having brought three hundred presentadoes more. The news from the Cinco Villas consists simply of unimportant skirmishes, which do not affect the result of the war either one way or the other.

A FUNNY TELEGRAM.

The publication of a telegram from Gen. RODAS in the Madrid journals, where he announces that the rebel Generals have sued for pardon, and only ask that life and property be spared, has taken Cubans and Spaniards by surprise. As this information may be badly interpreted, and as your correspondent happens to know the origin and foundation of this telegram, it will be as well that the correct version be published. The wife of Major-Gen. ARTEAGA, and the wife of EMBERTA, called on Gen. RODAS, and asked him whether the lives of their respective relatives would be spared in case they would surrender, to which RODAS responded that he could not pardon any of the leaders of the revolution; but as he desired to end the war he would send to Madrid for instructions on the point. The Government, in stating that it would deal generously with the insurgent officers, is not sufficiently explicit, and the wanton breach of faith in CASANOVA'S case, and the pressure brought to bear on the Government, is a warning to others. We have also to learn yet whether ARTEAGA and EMBERTA have authorized this proceeding on the partief their female relatives. The fact is, the people are becoming heartily sick and tired of the war, and would do almost anything to finish it. Those of both parties who are in no danger, or have not suffered anything yet, are very determined and loud-mouthed, but the real workers on both sides feel different.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

Progress of Revolution in Banda Oriental — Lopez Jordan Declaring Against the National Government—National Guard Called Out.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BUENOS AYRES, Saturday, April 23, 1870.

The conflicting rumors which reach us from our sister Republic regarding what progress the revolution under APARICIO is really making, leaves one somewhat in doubt as to the real state of affairs. If we believe official reports, he is clearly giving way, and yet he seems to offer as much resistance to the national forces as ever. The latest accounts announce that APARICIO is at present besieging a small town called Melo, his command being estimated at some hundred men. The advanced guard of the national army, under MAXIMO PERES, who was himself a revolutionary leader only a few months ago, is following the rebels up. Gen. CAMPO with a small force being successful a few days ago in defeating a body supposed to be marching to join APARICIO.

JORDAN'S REVOLT IN ENTRE RIOS.

So much for the Banda Oriental. Unfortunately things nearer home are looking black enough. By a chance steamer, I sent you word of the assassination of Gen. URQUIZA, the Captain-General of Entre Rios. This was instigated by LOPEZ JORDAN, who immediately declared himself Governor in URQUIZA'S place, his nomination being at first supported by the Province. Naturally this location of affairs alarmed the National Government in an awkward position, since, if JORDAN were legally elected, it did not seem clear how the election should be rendered void. However, troops were promptly embarked and sent to Parana. Their arrival seemed to change the tide of affairs, as all the other districts have now declared against JORDAN. Among the "chiefs," or party leaders with whom this Republic abounds, almost all the most influential support the National Government; Gen. GALARZA, a man whose influence is considered greater than that of all the rest, being among the number of loyal. Gen. BARTOLOMEO MITRE is appointed Commander-in-Chief, and GALARZA is command the cavalry of Entre Rios. The Province is occupied by three different divisions of national troops, one at Gualeyguaychu, MITRE'S Head-quarters, and others at La Paz and Parana. Thus it would appear that owing to BARTOLOMEO'S prompt and decisive measures this trouble will blow over without much bloodshed, even though JORDAN has declared war, on the ground that the National government has no right to interfere in the internal Government of the Province. As yet all we can do is to hope for the best, for, though all things appear to be taken a speedy restoration of peace in Entre Rios, still in this land of revolutions there is no saying how long these party struggles will continue, nor with what results.

THE PENSO GANG IN BUENOS AYRES.

All the regular troops stationed in this city have been sent up the river, the National Guard having been called out to garrison the town. Talking about this, there is more real than pretense shown in catching up those who are found without their "protections." No notice is given, but small recruiting parties are sent out all over the city, generally at night, who seize every one not having a Consulate protection, whether foreigners or not. These unfortunates are marched off to the barracks, and given a night's lodging gratis, the examination of their claims to foreign birth being left to the following day. On the first evening, the 27th inst., over three hundred were marched off to various barracks, at least fifty of whom were foreigners. These were, of course, set at liberty the next day, but the inconvenience growing out of this system is one which demands serious attention. Naturally there is a rush on the Consulates for "papeletas," or protections.

AFFAIRS IN PARAGUAY.

The Count D'EU passed through this city last week on route for Rio, and the unfortunate Paraguayans are about to be left to their own resources. PARANHOS, the Brazilian Minister, is still up the river in Asuncion, but is expected to leave shortly. Other news from Paraguay affords nothing worthy of remark.

A PAPER MILL.

There is some talk of establishing a paper manufactory in this city. Such a business ought to pay, considering the quantity of paper used, if we may judge from the number of newspapers printed here, whose name is truly legion.

STREET CARS.

Our streets are being Americanized. We have three street railways now running and several more in contemplation. These modern improvements are well appreciated, to judge from the number of passengers carried. PICKYUNE.

BRAZIL.

Reception in Rio of the Comte d'Eu.

The Anglo-Brazilian Times of the 5th of May, received by the French mail, gives full particulars of the grand reception accorded to his Royal Highness the Comte D'EU, on his arrival from Paraguay. The Comte reached Rio Janeiro on the 29th of April, and "was received by the whole city with most extraordinary demonstrations of rejoicing, and with a unanimous enthusiasm never surpassed if even equaled by those which greeted the return of the fleet on every occasion. In sign, too, of the general jubilee, the foreigners and the natives combined to decorate the city in the most magnificent manner, and a general and splendid illumination was maintained for four nights, the equal of which was never before witnessed in Brazil. Among other demonstrations of a strictly private character, a large deputation of ladies presented a triumphal crown to the Comte D'Eu on the 2d, and sang the hymn of victory before him. Beautiful wreaths and triumphal crowns have been also presented to him in the name of private special associations, the ship-carpenters of the arsenal have obtained his acceptance of a beautiful model of the monitor Alagoas, and the typographists presented him with an address and with the manuscript papers of which he is whom they were giving freedom in honor of him. The Comte D'Eu's return has been the means of giving liberty to many slaves, as at least thirty slaves are already known to have been freed in Rio alone, in addition to recorded declarations which will have the effect of annually making many children free at birth."

It is said that the Comte D'Eu intends to proceed to Europe shortly with the Princess Imperial.

JEFFERSON AND WEBSTER.

Their Views on the Sabbath, the Bible and Sunday-Schools.

From the Boston Traveller, June 11.

During the late anniversary meetings in this city, some pains were taken to circulate about the hall where many of the meetings were held, tracts, designed to bring into discredit the Bible, the Sabbath, and the institutions of religion generally. Previous to the anniversary of the American Sunday-school Union, some one took the trouble to scatter over the seats of Tremont Temple a tract designed to show that Mr. JEFFERSON had no very good opinion of the Bible or the institutions of religion founded on its teachings. The attention of the chairman of the meeting, Hon. E. S. TOBEY, having been called to this, he thought it peculiarly appropriate to read a letter in his possession from DANIEL WEBSTER, written thirty-eight years ago, to Prof. PEASE, of New-York, in response to his report of the New-York Sabbath-school Association, which the Professor had sent to Manchester. In this Mr. WEBSTER describes an interview which he had with THOMAS JEFFERSON several years previously, while spending the Sabbath at his residence in Virginia, and repeats Mr. JEFFERSON'S utterances respecting the Sabbath, the Bible, and the Sabbath-school institution, which very clearly show that whatever speculative opinions he may have expressed at any time, he was very far from being the sceptic which some would have us believe. And this conversation, and the entire tone of Mr. WEBSTER'S letter, prove conclusively the deep respect and reverence for religious things which were ever cherished by this most eminent of American lawyers and statesmen:

LETTER FROM MR. WEBSTER.

MARSHFIELD, June 15, 1832.

Prof. Pease:

DEAR SIR: I have received your very able and interesting annual report of the condition of the New-York Sabbath-school Association, and read it with great pleasure and instruction. It is gratifying, very gratifying, to learn that in "a City where vice and immorality run riot with impunity," a few humble Christians have devoted their time and energies to the cause of religion, and I fervently pray that your labors may be crowned with success.

The Sabbath-school is one of the great institutions of the day. It leads our youth in the path of truth and morality, and makes them good men and useful citizens. As a school of religious instruction it is of inestimable value; as a civil institution it is priceless, and has done more to preserve our liberties than grave statesmen and earnest soldiers. Let it then be fostered and preserved until the end of time!

I once defended a man charged with the awful crime of murder. At the conclusion of the trial I asked him what could induce him to stain his hands with the blood of a fellow-being? "Oh, my blood-shot eyes, full upon me, he replied, in a tone of despair, "Mr. WEBSTER, in my youth I spent the holy Sabbath in evil amusements, instead of frequenting the house of prayer and praise." Could we go back to the early years of all hardened criminals, I believe, yea, firmly believe, that their first departure from the path of morality was when they abandoned the Sabbath-school, and their subsequent crimes might thus be traced back to the neglect of youthful religious instruction.

Many years ago I spent a Sabbath with THOMAS JEFFERSON, at his residence in Virginia. It was in the month of June, and the weather was delightful. While engaged in discussing the beauties of the Bible, the sound of a bell broke upon our ears, when, turning to the Sage of Monticello, I remarked, "How sweetly, how very sweetly sounds that Sabbath bell!" The distinguished statesman for a moment seemed lost in thought, and then replied, "Yes, my dear WEBSTER, yes, it makes the heart, it calms our passions, and makes us boys again." Here I observed that man was only an animal formed for religious worship, and that notwithstanding all the sophistry of EPICURUS, LUCRETIUS and VOLTAIRE, the Scriptures stood upon a rock as firm as immovable as truth itself; that man in his present, infirm condition, turned the mental eyes toward immortality, and that the poet only echoed the general sentiment of our nature in saying, that "the soul, secure in her existence, smiles at the drawn dagger, and defies its point."

Mr. JEFFERSON fully concurred in this opinion, and observed that the tendency of the American mind was in a different direction; and that Sunday-schools (he did not use exactly these words) tern, Sabbath) presented the [illegible] means, under the Constitution, of [illegible] rock on which our Free Republic was to be [illegible] "BURKE," said he, "never uttered a more important truth than that when the ordinary ties of religious education was the cheap defence of nations." "RAISER," said Mr. JEFFERSON, "has done more for our country than the present generation will acknowledge; perhaps, when I am cold, he will obtain his reward; I hope so, earnestly hope so; I am considered by many, Mr. WEBSTER, to have little religion, but now as not the time to correct errors of this sort. I have always said, and always will say, that the studious perusal of the sacred volume will make better citizens, better fathers, and better husbands. Of the distinguished RAISER he was 'clever at remarkable sketches.'" I took the liberty of saying that I found more pleasure in his poetry than in the best productions of Greece and Rome; that the "harp upon the willows by Babylon" had charms for me beyond anything in the numbers of the blind man of Smyrna. I then turned to Jeremiah, (there was a fine folio of the Scriptures before me of same,) and read aloud some of the most sublime passages that used to delight me on my father's knee. But I fear, my dear friend, I shall tire you with my prolix account of what was a pleasant Sabbath, spent in the company of one who has filled a very large space in our political and literary annals.

Thanking you for your report, and heartily concurring with you in the truth of your quotation, that "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people," I remain, with a high regard, your friend, D. WEBSTER.

NAVIGATION AND COMMERCE.

Synopsis of a Report from the Bureau of Statistics.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Mr. EDWARD YOUNG, Chief of the Bureau of Statistics, furnishes the following synopsis of monthly report No 9, now in press. The values of the imports and re-exports are given in specie, and those of the domestic exports in mixed currency:

Month ending	Imports.	Domestic Exports.	Foreign Imports.
March 31, 1870	$44,031,882	$51,112,976	$3,072,985
March 31, 1869	52,217,604	31,605,142	3,316,149
Nine months ended March 31, 1870	329,031,825	278,352,757	28,402,351
Nine months ended March 31, 1869	369,826,918	256,765,117	15,924,352

Proportion of the foregoing shipped in American and foreign vessels respectively:

Pitiful Ingratitude—An Old Man's Children Drive Him from Their Houses and Leave Him to Perish in the Woods.

From the London (Ont.) Free Press, June 11.

A heartless and shocking case of inhumanity has just occurred in the township of Windham. A man now upward of eighty years of age, and who has resided in that township for years, has for some time been dependent upon his children. He had lived with one of his daughters, two or three of whom were married, for a time, and then would remain a short time with another daughter, and so on. A couple of months or so ago the old man had an altercation with some of the members of the family, whom we shall designate No. 1, and with whom he then resided. He left the residence of No. 1 after the altercation, and supposing that he had gone to live with family No. 2, a few miles distant, No. 1 packed up his clothes and took them to the house of No. 2. No. 2, however, was apparently determined that he would no longer be bothered with the poor old man, and would not allow the clothes to be left on his premises, and No. 2 therefore left them in charge of a neighbor. Soon afterward the old man arrived at No. 2's, and was told that his clothes were not there, nor could they tell him where they were. He then started for No. 1's, where he arrived so feeble that he was unable to walk any further. Daughter No. 1 then took him in a wagon to No. 2. How long he remained there we cannot say, but finally another No. 2, who lived with No. 2, got him in a vehicle and took him to within a mile or two of No. 1's, setting him down upon the road and telling him to get to a house near by. Instead of going to the house, however, he wandered into a piece of woods, and no more was seen or heard of him for about seven teen days, when he was found lying insensible in the woods. When found, son-in-law No. 2 was apprised of the fact, but he refused to allow his team to be taken to convey him from the woods to the house, and also refused to go for a doctor. Some neighbors acted the part of good Samaritans, carried the old man to a house, and dispatched a messenger for a medical man. Around where the old man lay in the woods every twig and leaf was eaten, and it was evident that these had been his only means of subsistence during the time he was in the woods. At last accounts he was in a very weak and precarious condition.

Fire in a Washington Hotel—Panic Among the Boarders—Timely Rescue of Ladies.

From the Washington Star, June 11.

About 4½ o'clock this morning, fire was discovered in the St. James Hotel, corner of Sixth-street and Pennsylvania-avenue, by a colored watchman of the house, and in a short time the rooms above were filled with a dense smoke, creating a panic among the boarders. The fire was soon ascertained to be in the basement. The alarm was promptly given, and the Fire Department soon arrived and in good time. The house being all closed up, the smoke became intolerable, nearly suffocating the inmates, rendering it impossible for them to find their way down the stairs. Mrs. Senator CRAGIN and her infant child were taken out of a third story window to the ground by the firemen of the Hook and Ladder Company; and Miss BURNS, a young lady, was rescued in an almost insensible condition by Mr. CHRYSENDER COHEN, son of Mr. ROBERT COHEN, who gallantly ascended the stairway when no one else could be induced to go, and bore the lady in his arms down the ladder to the ground. The fire was confined to the basement, though much damage was done to the walls above was sustained from discoloration by smoke. The fire is thought to have been the work of an incendiary. The loss to the building is about $1,000, and the loss to Mr. BURNS, proprietor of the hotel, in personal property, is about the same amount. The barber-shop of PASQUALE QUALE, in the basement, was entirely destroyed. On this there was no insurance; loss several thousand dollars. Messrs. BURNS & CO. have given him the use of a back room on Sixth-street.

THE CROPS.

The Wheat Harvest in Virginia.

From the Petersburg Index, June 11.

Within a day or two past the wheat harvest has commenced in the neighborhood of this city, and we are glad to learn that the early varieties are exempt from rust, and the product promises to be bountiful. The ears are very well filled, and remarkably heavy. A new variety of wheat—new at least in this section—called the German amber, was seeded last Fall by several farmers, and is of the finest promise. As far as we can learn, the late kinds will not be ready for cutting before the beginning of week after next—say the 20th of the month. Owing to the extreme wetness of the season, nothing favorable can now be predicated of it; but if the intervening week should prove dry and cool, it may escape the rust, which is all that can now be dreaded.

From the Richmond Dispatch, June 11.

The recent rains and winds have done very great damage to the ripening crops. The wheat, which will be ready for the blade on Monday, is in many places blown down. The same can be said of the oats, particularly the Winter oats; and the clover has fared no better. That which has been mowed is lying on the ground, uncured and decaying.

Cotton, Corn and Wheat in Georgia.

From the Rome (Ga.) Courier, June 7.

We conversed with quite a number of our farmers yesterday, and they all report the wheat in fine condition, and as more promising than for several years. They all report a large area in cotton, though they claim that there is enough corn and wheat for home consumption, and some to spare, and if no enforcement materializes to make the cotton yield, the plenty of everything will be made. The wheat crop is unusually fine, and the yield will far exceed the expectations of our farmers.

Effects of the Heavy Rains in the South.

From the Charleston (S. C.) Courier, June 10.

The recent rains and stronger suns have had a stimulating effect on vegetation, and the general reports to hand for this period speak in satisfactory terms of the healthy progress of the crops. There have been frequent showers in this vicinity, and there is some fear of too much water, but the rains have not been continuous, nor have no injury has resulted. The general outlook gives promise of a successful agricultural year. The increase in the area planted in cotton is estimated at about fifteen per cent, taking the entire cotton belt.

Pleasant Rains in Illinois—Good Prospects.

From the Springfield (Ill.) Journal, June 12.

The prospects for realizing an immense harvest from the unusually large crops that have been planted in this county, increase every day. Up to two days ago rain had been scarce, and the ground was beginning to get dry, but owing to the splendid condition of the weather when the most of the corn and the crops were planted and germinating, sufficient moisture was retained to give the crops a start. Within the last two or three days we have been visited by several refreshing showers, which were just the one thing needed to help the corn-plowers, who are now very busy all over the State lowering the earth around the promising maize.

The Wheat Prospect in Minnesota.

From the St. Paul Press, June 9.

While in other Western States the crops have been smitten with an intense and prolonged drouth, Minnesota has been blessed with abundant rains, and the wheat crop has never been more promising than today, while the season has been far forward. The indications is that it will be harvested two weeks earlier than usual. With wheat at $1 per bushel, our farmers will be able to realize abundant profit from their labors, and their prosperity will infuse new life and activity into all branches of business.

Cotton in the South—The Question of Labor.

From the Macon (Ga.) Messenger, June 8.

The progress of the American cotton crop is astonishing, and utterly floors all the prophets and calculators in this section. Time and again it has been demonstrated by "figures which cannot lie" that any material increase in the cotton yield of the South is impossible, and time and again we have expressed the confident opinion that the crop would swell rapidly from year to year, and in no great time distance all past achievements. But where is the labor to come from? Don't you see it falling off in this district? Don't you hear the grievous complaints of scarcity here, there and everywhere throughout the cotton region? Every year the negro force employed in the culture is shrinking and becoming less efficient, and every year, consequently, the crop must diminish. But it don't diminish, it swells, it gives the enormous gain of almost 500,000 bales. The crop of 1869, the precise aggregate of which was disputed, amounted to somewhere about 2,450,000 bales. The crop of 1869 is now estimated at 2,897,000 bales. What will be the crop of 1870? Following the old talk about areas and colored field hands, we say there can be not excess, and we said the same last year.

But the truth is, outside of all these labored calculations about negro labor and areas planted, there is a vast white man's crop—grown in patches and by white labor—the aggregate of which is swelling from year to year with great rapidity. It is a contribution by farm-drops, which by imperceptible additions swells the mighty stream to the point of overflow. Who shall compute the vast aggregate of food produced in little dribbets by the people in their garden patches, poultry-yards and cattle and pig-pens? These do not count in the crop statistics, but would present an astonishing aggregate. But similar contributions to the cotton crop, however insignificant in detail to the statistician and cotton-broker, make the final product. They are accumulated in the grand total, and in our opinion are potential in falsifying the estimates we make of the probable volume of future crops.

Seeing, then, that our cotton crop is so far outrunning all anticipations in respect to its magnitude, common sense dictates that the planter shall abandon all hopes of high prices predicated on scarcity and short crops, and with these he must abandon all idea of subsisting himself and force upon imported food at high prices. He can no longer afford to bring his bread and meat fifteen hundred miles by railway, and employ the white labor of the West and New-England, at $1 50 per day, to raise his grain and meat, forage, sheep and mules, and ship them at large expense over a great distance. He must do as they do or he will be ruined. He must produce what he consumes, and sell only the surplus.

WEST VIRGINIA POLITICS.

The Democratic State Convention—The Negro Question—Platform and Nominations.

The Wheeling (West Va.) Intelligencer reports that the proceedings and deliberations of the Democratic State Convention, which was held in Charleston on Wednesday last, were far from harmonious, the chief bone of contention being the negro. The Jackson-Camden wing of the party were for taking position for the Fifteenth amendment, and they succeeded in getting a majority report from the Committee on Resolutions in their favor; but a tremendous volley was made against it. The unfailing appeal to the Democratic prejudice against the negro carried the day, and the Democracy by a large majority declared against that measure. JOHN J. JACOB, of Hampshire, was nominated for Governor; C. P. T. Moore, of Mason, for Judge of the Court of Appeals; Major E. A. Burgess, of Marion, for Auditor; JOHN M. PHELPS, of Mason, for Secretary of State; BENJAMIN GRIFFITH, of Hancock, for State Treasurer, and JOSEPH SPRIGG, of Hardy, for Attorney-General. The Convention adopted the following platform of principles:

The Democratic and Conservative citizens of West Virginia, desiring to aid in restoring the blessings of a free Republic to all the interests of the State and country, present to the voters of the State the following declaration of principles, and invite their co-operation in giving them effect:

First—That the Federal Government had no right to deny to States of this Union the privileges of participation in its affairs, and that all discussion of the rights of States in Congress and all Federal interference in the purely domestic concerns of the State, is unwarranted by the Federal Constitution and subversive of good government.

Second—That the present system of taxation, multiplying, as it does, the bulk of the Federal revenue from the labor rather than from the wealth of the country, is unjust and oppressive, and that this system should be reformed so as to relieve the industry of the country from its unjust burdens, abolish the unnecessary and vexatious features of stamp, license and income taxes, dispense with the services of Federal agents that pry into the private business of the people, cutting off their salaries and provide for the collection of the Federal revenue by state and county officers.

Third—That the Republican Party, by voting to ratify the Fifteenth amendment to the Constitution, which has already violated its pledge that the question of suffrage should be retained within the control of the people of the states. Calling to political power an alien and inferior class, it has declared the white race incapable of self-government, the opposition to this monstrous doctrine, we invite all intelligent white men to unite with us in asserting the principle that the white race is the ruling race of this Republic.

Fourth—That the Fifteenth Fifteenth Amendment lately passed by Congress, is corrupting to public morals in that it offers premiums for perjury subversive of the States, in that it gives Federal authority control of State elections, and prejudicial to peace of the country, in that it invests the negroes with exclusive and therefore privileges, lifting them to power and dignity through the degradation of the whites.

Fifth—That for the advancement of West Virginia as all her interests, and especially to secure good government to her people, we demand thorough reform in the management of our State affairs, and the greatest retrenchment that may be consistent with the public good.

Prompt collection of the large balances in favor of have accumulated in the hands of delinquent sheriffs; such faithful public officers in the State finances as will prevent further defalcations in the revenue, and such economy in expenditures as will secure the adjustment of our public debt on a just and equitable basis, at the earliest practicable period.

A public policy as it will invite immigration, capital and enterprise, and such as will secure the development of our resources and the prosperity of our people.

The unalterable determination of opposing from the public schools, and the Legislature, the mixture in these institutions and destroying our educational system for the benefit of the blacks.

Full protection to the people against outrages provided for by the Reconstruction law and constantly executed by regular state officers.

We invite all good citizens without distinction of party, whether Democrats, Conservatives, or Republicans, to unite with us in giving effect to the policy here enunciated.

INSOLVENCY.

An Opinion by Judge Ludlow, of Philadelphia—Petition for the Benefit of the Law.

PHILADELPHIA, June 13.—Judge LUDLOW yesterday delivered the following interesting and important opinion in the case of R. H. WINSMIDDER, insolvent. This is a rule to show cause why the petitioner should not be permitted to file a bond conditioned for his appearance at the next term of the Court of Common Pleas, then and there to present his petition for the benefit of the insolvent laws of this Commonwealth. The case is this:

WINSMIDDER was sued in the Supreme Court at suit prior to an action founded on actual fraud. Judgment for a large sum was obtained against him. Upon the judgment a capias was issued, and he was arrested and is now in the county prison. Pending these proceedings, the petitioner was adjudged bankrupt on his own petition, and was discharged on June 12, 1867. The plaintiff in judgment in the capias was notified, it is said, of the bankruptcy, and did not oppose the discharge. It is alleged that he has been in confinement more than sixty days, now desires to file the bond as required by the statute in order that he may be discharged. It is very clear that if Congress has legislated upon this particular subject, the power of this Court under the twenty-first section of the act of Assembly, passed April 16, 1845, to take the benefit of the insolvent laws of the Commonwealth must be taken as a whole, and if any part of those laws is suspended by the operation of the Bankrupt act, so must the whole be; therefore, they contend that we cannot make this rule absolute. The first position, which seems to have been taken by counsel, is that the act has been repeatedly decided by the United States Courts that a debt fraudulently contracted is not discharged by adjudication of bankruptcy. The twenty-sixth section of the act of Congress expressly exempts bankrupts from arrest, except in civil action, when the same is founded on a debt from which the obligor from which his discharge in bankruptcy would not release him. The exception restrains the power of the United States Courts, and they cannot discharge judgment or prevent its enforcement by State authority. This has been already decided. It is useless to argue that. Congress, however, has legislated upon the whole subject covered by our insolvent laws, for here is a case perfectly accepted. The United States Courts have neither right to interfere with the judgment of State Courts founded upon fraud, nor can they discharge from imprisonment those against whom judgments have been obtained, and whose persons are held in execution. It is not decided that Congressional legislation upon the subject of debt suspends the operation of the State law upon the same subject, nor that if the law extends the jurisdiction of that United States Courts over the person of a debtor, yet when there is no insolvent claim in the case, and only contracts (as indicated class of cases, it surely must have been the intention of the national legislators not to interfere, in a specified class of cases, with the laws of the several States. To give any other construction to the act of Congress would be to leave the petitioner without redress, and to declare that imprisonment for debt had not only been revived in the United States, but was also the perpetual incarceration of the debtor, who, whatever may have been his conduct, is not to pay the penalty prescribed in addition, and that if the Dominion intends to sending an invading force into this country, the Red River people will reject the Manitoba bill and strike for independence. They would be satisfied, he thinks, with the provisions of that bill in the main, but they will not accept it at the point of the sword, nor will they surrender Red River, and the Provincial Government, to whom they are indebted for their commission, to the despotic power of a military force. The expedition they regard as an insult, a menace—an act of war—and they don't propose to allow it to enter their territory if they can help it, and they think they can. Until that army is withdrawn they will not even consider propositions accompanied with this hostile demonstration.

CAPSIZED IN A SQUALL.

A Man and Three More from Five Miles on the Bosom of a Sheet in Mobile Bay—Rescued by Fisch and a Happy Rescue.

From the Mobile (Ala.) Register, June 7.

Our fellow-citizen, Mr. D. C. SELLERS, left Point Clear, Sunday afternoon, in his elegant sail-boat, on a trip to town, accompanied by his little son and two sons of Mr. CHAMBROW. Having reached the middle of the bay, about 4 o'clock, he perceived the approach of a squall, and made haste to take in sail. As well as we have ascertained, he had succeeded in lowering the mainsail, but, owing to some accident, did not succeed in getting in the jib before the squall struck the boat, capsizing it, and carrying away the mast. Fortunately, or more properly, owing to Mr. SELLERS' great presence of mind, all succeeded in getting upon the bottom of the boat. This was an insecure place at best, with the waves continually dashing over them, and the condition of things was made worse by the want of a keel, which might have furnished a hold to the little footlovers, for whom it is a common boast to say Mr. SELLERS was chiefly concerned. At length, after repeated attempts, by diving under the boat, he succeeded in raising and securing the centerboard, to which they were able to cling with a greater feeling of security.

Even with this improved condition of things, it was a trying situation, as the youths especially, exposed to the dashing of the waves, which as they rose, after the subsidence of the squall, threatened at every sea to sweep them away; at the same time that they were almost literally scalded by the sun, and blinded by the glare flung in their faces by the billows. An occasional remark upon "the light place" they were in showed the plucky with which Sellers kept up and rallied in the midst of danger. But boyish nerves fail where boyish hearts still hold out, and after four long hours of exposure and struggle, the youngest of the party was obliged to say, "Father, I can't hold on much longer." The father then added his support to the remaining strength of the weary little fellow, and thus they were carefully clinging in the now darkened scene.

At last the lights of the Amos were discovered, on her way to town, and the welcome flashes of the red and green lamps the water told the cheering tale that she was coming head on to them. The sense of hope seen rose higher and higher above the vacillating and the fainting of hope, when a voice, mingled with the dash of her wheels, spoke of the deliverance close at hand. Their hails were soon answered, the speed of the messenger of safety was checked, and she cautiously approached the group, who were taken on board at about 8 o'clock, and brought safely home, little, if any, the worse except from exhaustion.

Assaults on Policemen—Two Fired at by a Desperado.

At 11 o'clock last evening Officer FAY, of the Twenty-second Precinct, arrested a man at the corner of Eighth-avenue and Forty-third-street for disorderly conduct, but had scarcely started with him for the station-house when he was attacked by a large number of rowdies, who rescued the prisoner, and, after beating the officer severely about the head, all made their escape. At two o'clock this morning, Officer CROWLEY, of the Twenty-eighth Precinct, seeing a man running through West Houston-street, near Hudson

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The past week has not been marked by any very important transactions in real estate. Several sales of suburban property took place, the most important of which was on Tuesday, when LAWRENCE, OAKLEY & FLEURY disposed of a large number of lots at Flushing, L. I. The public sales of City property at the Exchange Sales-room amounted to $65,000. The recorded transfers reported were 126 in number, and represented values to the amount of $3,582,827.

POTTER BROTHERS, of Pine-street, have sold at private sale six lots of land, three fronting Central Park, on the south side of Fifty-ninth-street, and three lots in the rear on Fifty-eighth-street, being distant 175 feet west of the Fifth-avenue Plaza, for P. CALLAGHAN, at $125,000.

On Tuesday there will be an extensive auction sale of villa lots, at Valley Stream, by Messrs. WYCKOFF & LITTLE. A thousand lots will be sold without reserve. Valley Stream is on the South-side Railroad, at the junction of the Rockaway Branch Road, distant fourteen miles from New-York, and seven miles from the beach at Rockaway.

MUSIC IN RELIGION.

Its Influence in the Culture of the Soul—A Discourse by Rev. Dr. Thompson.

Rev. Dr. JOSEPH P. THOMPSON, of the Broadway Tabernacle Church, delivered a discourse last evening on "Music as Related to the Culture of the Soul and to the Felicity of Heaven." He began by alluding to the great jubilee which is to occur during the present week in celebration of the birthday of the great composer whose works are known and admired in all parts of the civilized world. Not only would thousands and tens of thousands, he said, participate in the festivities in his honor here, but in the cities of the Old World there would be similar evidences of the universal veneration in which his memory is held. This indicated a widespread, if not a universal appreciation of the power and the beauty of music in its highest forms. In some of its phases, of vocal or instrumental, solo or concerted, light or massive, gay or solemn, music awoke responses in almost every heart. It appeals to something inherent in human nature. It has always formed an important part of the worship of the Deity. The Bible recognizes its value everywhere, and is filled with allusions to it. The whole Book, indeed, might be taken as a text on this subject. The Old Testament gives several accounts of grand musical festivals, in which the singers and the players on instruments took part, and the Book of Revelation was a grand oratorio from beginning to end, and might be set to music as a whole. It was not, however, merely a work of the imagination, but a divinely-inspired composition, symbolizing the realities of the spiritual life hereafter. Music is a manifestation of that which is divinest in the soul of man, and is adapted to its highest culture. This fact was recognized by PLATO, and musical festivals were to have a prominent place in his ideal Republic. Of modern philosophers Hermann Semmon has given us the most skilful and profound analysis of this marvelous faculty of the soul. According to his view, every mental excitement or emotion is accompanied by a corresponding muscular action, and the finer and loftier feelings find expression through the muscles of the voice in music. Musical tones, however, depend in a measure on environment and conditions, and hence, emotions are sometimes awakened which were never before experienced. Music has a science as abstruse and intricate as the highest departments of mathematics. There is nothing so refined, delicate and marvelous, and none but men of the highest genius ever completely mastered its principles. It needs great ingenuity and intellectual power, combined with the finest emotional nature. The real source of music is the soul, and in many cases the grandest compositions have been perfected without the aid of audible sounds. Several of the great masters, indeed, were so dull of hearing that they could not distinguish the notes of their own compositions which have thrilled the souls of generations of men, but no one ever had anything like the appreciation of their beauty and harmony which they felt themselves. BEETHOVEN, during the last twenty years of his life, and when the greatest of all his works were composed, was quite deaf, and made many touching allusions to the misery which he felt on that account. The great composers were all men of an intensely emotional nature, and had the power of conveying their feelings to others in sweet sounds without the help of words. Instances are on record of their holding converse with each other by means of improvised strains, without ever once speaking. BACH called the organ the voice of God, and regarded himself as interpreting its marvelous language to men who had not the power of comprehending its mysteries without assistance. When thus interpreted, it finds a response in every soul, and conveys indefinite and vague impressions of a life hereafter of more ordinary experience. Music is the highest of all the fine arts, and ministers more than any other to the real welfare of humanity, and gives us a foretaste of Heaven itself.

The New Railroad Bridge Over the Connecticut River.

The new bridge constructed by the "New-York and Boston Shore Line," over the Connecticut River, was formally opened on Saturday. The entire length of the bridge is 1,150 feet. The substructure consists of fourteen column piers to support the stationary spans, besides the abutments at the shore ends, and eleven column piers to support the turn-table and draw, or swing span. Each column pier is formed by driving a number of piles in close proximity, covering in the aggregate an area of five feet square. The piles are firmly bolted together; iron cylinders, some seven or eight feet in diameter, are then let down in sections over the piles so as to completely surround them, and the space between the cylinder and piles is filled up with concrete. This portion of the work was done under the patent of S. B. Cushing, the engineer in charge of the substructure, assisted by Col. J. A. Moxnon.

The stationary spans of the bridge are constructed upon the truss principle, of wood and iron, according to Howe's patent. The draw or swing span is constructed entirely of wrought-iron, except the flooring, which is of wood. The draw turns upon a table of SELLER's patent. It is 90 feet long, leaving ample room when open for the passage of the largest sized vessels. It is built on the old Pratt style, with some peculiarity in arrangement of the gallows-frame and cords, designed by the contractor, Mr. J. R. SMITH, of Springfield. The draw is provided with friction rollers under the center and ends to facilitate the operation of turning it, which can easily be done by two men.

The anticipated strain upon the bridge is estimated at 2,600 pounds to the running foot, while the breaking weight is set down at five times the figures given. The cost of the bridge has been about $235,000.

The contractors prosecuted their work with energy, and brought it to a successful termination on Monday last; and after some severe tests applied to it, ran the trains across and dispensed with the services of the old ferry-boat, to the great joy of the patrons of the road.

At the opening on Saturday appropriate speeches were made by J. P. TRUMBULL, of Stonington; E. W. WRIGHT, of New-Haven; HENRY HOYNE, of New-Haven; S. H. SCRANTON, President of the Shore Line Road, and Hon. HENRY G. LEWIS, Mayor of New-Haven. The draw was opened, and the ferry-boat, with the party on board, passed through twice, in order to afford the guests an opportunity of witnessing the operation of the draw. Everything passed off very pleasantly, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather.

Anniversary of St. Barnabas House.

Last evening the anniversary services of St. Barnabas House, a charitable institution, which is maintained by the Protestant Episcopal Church of this City, was held at the chapel of the House, No. 306 Mulberry-street. The meeting was opened with religious exercises.

Rev. Dr. T. M. PEYSER, of St. Michael's Church, Chairman of the Committee of Direction of the City Mission, delivered an address, in which he gave a history of St. Barnabas House, established in December, 1856. The last year's statistics are as follows: Whole number of inmates, 3,118, (viz.: Protestants, 1,961; Romanists, 913; Jews, 14;) sent to situations, 798 [illegible]; sent to other institutions, 331; sent to friends, 615; left the House on their own accord, 60; dismissed, 27; number of lodgings, 17,057; number of meals given, 76,137; families visited, 449; persons visited, 4,962. The speaker stated that the house No. 306 Mulberry-street had been hired for a day nursery for children of parents who were working out, away from their residences, during the daytime. St. Barnabas House will therefore comprise Nos. 304, 306 and 308 Mulberry-street in future. Rev. Dr. H. C. POTTER, of Grace Church, delivered an address, in which he gave his observations among the Mormons of Utah and among the Chinese at San Francisco, and stated that neither had any charitable institutions for their sick or poor which in any way whatever could be compared with the Christian charities, especially those of this City. He concluded with words of encouragement for St. Barnabas House. He was followed by Rev. Dr. MATSON, of Jersey City, who made an address in which he showed what efforts were made by the Roman Catholic Church in this country for the support of their charitable and educational institutions. He stated that the Protestant Church of this country in its strife with the Roman, in which the former had common sense, enlightenment and the spirit of the age on its side, could win the day only when the Protestants were equally as willing to make sacrifices for the support of their charitable institutions as the Catholics. With religious exercises the meeting was brought to a close.

The Quarantine Difficulty.

Dr. COCHRAN, Health Officer of Brooklyn, has written the following communication to the Commissioners of Quarantine in regard to difficulties which have recently arisen in relation to the unloading of vessels at wharves in Brooklyn:

BROOKLYN, June 11, 1870.

To the Commissioners of Quarantine:

GENTLEMEN: Will you please inform me by what law or by what authority certain warehouses of this city are exclusively designated for the reception of infectious cargo of Quarantine, and by what right the attempt has been made to move vessels from wharves by direction of the Health Officer of the Port of New-York? Also, by what section of any law how the Quarantine or any other officer, has the right, after a vessel leaves Quarantine with a clear bill of health, to dictate what wharf or wharves she shall go to in Brooklyn? Yours, respectfully,

GEO. COCHRAN.

The Disappearance of Frederick Etzold—An Alleged Heavy Defalcation.

For several days past the disappearance of Mr. FREDERICK ETZOLD, a citizen of Union Hill, N. J., and a former member of the Hudson County Board of Freeholders, has caused considerable excitement on the other side of the river, where Mr. ETZOLD was well known. On the 30th ult., he left his home to go to Bridgeport, where he was to collect some money. It was reported then on the following day he collected nearly $900, and started to return home. Since that time he has not been seen. It was remarked as a singular circumstance that Mrs. ETZOLD seemed to take no trouble to identify bodies that had been found, and that were represented to her as bearing a close general issue to the published description of Mr. ETZOLD. When the brother of Mr. ETZOLD, having visited New-York to make some investigations, returned to Union Hill, Mrs. ETZOLD betrayed no anxiety to learn what had been discovered, but appeared to be utterly unconcerned. Her strange conduct has at last been explained by the appearance of a large number of creditors of Mr. ETZOLD, who state that a few days before he disappeared he had succeeded in borrowing money from them. The most reliable reports place his amount obtained by Mr. ETZOLD at from $12,000 to $15,000. The property left by the missing man has been seized by the Sheriff of Hudson County to satisfy a part of the claims of his creditors. Mr. ETZOLD's reputation had been good, previous to his disappearance.

The Present Day Advantages and Temptations of Young Men—Discourse by Rev. J. P. Swift.

Rev. J. P. SWIFT discoursed last evening at the Attorney-street M. E. Church on "The Present Day Advantages and Temptations of Young Men," taking for his text the words, "Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt."—Exodus, iii. 10.

The revered gentleman said it could not be too strongly impressed on the minds of young men that they had a great duty to perform, and that society and the circumstances of the times demanded that they should enter into its interests and concerns and nerve themselves for the struggle. In the fulfilment of that duty cautious, daring, yet venturing perseverance should be call to his aid, ignoring altogether the dignity of some foolish persons whose faith is "I myself," and who suppose themselves superior to all others. There was something truly noble in the exercising of our powers in behalf of the world, and even though pecuniary results may not reward the soul, the consciousness of having done right is sufficient reward, and all sensible and good men regard him more than one thousand street Sheffers. At the present moment there were thousands of facilities presented to young men for their advancement and elevation, and in whatever direction they may employ their talents they should remember that no profession, no matter what it was, was ennobling when pursued dishonestly. There were thousands of fields open for the labor of worthy laborers, and it was indeed lamentable to find that tens of thousands of young men were ruining themselves, squandering their means and time, and marching forward to a premature grave. It was a singular fact that with the thousands of improvements for the elevation of mankind there was correspondingly efforts for their moral degradation. In this City, what temptations were lavished for the allurement of young men from virtue. They were walking the streets, they were around on it every way and every form, they were mixed up with pleasure and friendship, and it required stern resolve and virtue to surmount them. But with manhood and Christian principle, which was almost inseparable from a determination to succeed honestly, failure was an impossibility and the accomplishment of noble purpose a certainty. The reverend gentleman, in conclusion, counselled young men to avail themselves of the opportunity afforded them by their country for their personal and national benefit, and they would thus serve the ends of God and country.

Rev. Dr. Bellows on the Morality of Mr. Dickens' Writings.

Dr. BELLOWS, at the Church of the Messiah, yesterday, preached on "Knowledge with Zeal, and Zeal without Knowledge." In exemplifying his discourse, he referred to the late CHARLES DICKENS as an example of the former. He spoke in glowing terms of his works, designating them as breathing faith and Christianity in every line. The good done by them was incalculable. They formed the minds of many who looked up to the great novelist with admiration, and their tendency was to elevate the aspirations and to impart a healthy tone to the moral constitution of the reader. If a man with such influence and wielding such a mighty power with his pen were to use that influence and power in such a way as to corrupt the mind that pen would not many be led to think in a strain of immorality and believe evil to be meritorious? But this DICKENS never did. He never for a moment forgot the great object of his mission on earth, never by one line, or by one word, gave expression to an improper thought. His fertile imagination and graceful pen was enlisted in the work of redemption, and the homes of the lonely and the hearths of the unfortunate were made cheerful and the desolate heart was made hopeful by the words of comfort with which his works abounded. He told generally of the poorer classes, of their struggles with poverty, and of their accession to wealth, but their road to riches was not by crime or vice, but by the steadfast, strict observance of the principles of Christianity. He concluded by a most glowing encomium on the lamented author, and said that the name of CHARLES DICKENS would become synonymous with nobility of mind, and would be cherished as a household word, when that of many, perhaps more eminent than he, would pale beneath the light of Christian virtue which threw a halo over the deceased.

Church Dedication in Orange, N. J.

Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, near East Orange, N. J., was dedicated yesterday with appropriate ceremonies, and in presence of a large audience. At 10½ o'clock Rev. Bishop JAMES preached the dedicatory sermon from Romans i., 14, 17. In the afternoon Gen. THEODORE RUNYON, Mayor FERRY and Rev. Mr. RYMAN, pastor of the church, addressed the audience, and in the evening Rev. Dr. DASHIELL, President of Dickinson College, delivered a sermon.

The church is an elegant and commodious edifice, 86 feet wide by 90 feet long. It is built of brick, two stories in height, the lower story containing the class-rooms. The cost of the church, with the lot upon which it is erected, is about $68,000. Contributions to the amount of $4,000 were taken yesterday.

Another Road Robbery.

One of the most skillful of recent hold robberies was reported to Superintendent JOURDAN yesterday. Mr. W. U. HOWES, of Elgin, Ill., called upon that official, stating that he had just arrived from that place, and while en route had been robbed of ten $1,000 United States bonds, of the issue of 1865, and $710 in currency. He could give no details of the robbery, further than that when leaving home he had placed the bonds and money in his traveling-vise, which he had kept constantly in view, but on opening it, after a night spent in a sleeping-car of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad, both bonds and money were found to be gone. He had slept during a portion of the night, but had the best close to his person, and could imagine no way that any thief could have opened it and taken out the property without disturbing him. The case was given to Capt. KELSO, who has placed it in charge of experienced detectives.

Reopening of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn.

The Church of the Pilgrims, at the corner of Henry and Remsen streets, which has lately been undergoing extensive repairs, was reopened yesterday. The building has been enlarged so as to accommodate 200 more persons. A large extension has also been erected in the rear of the church, the first floor of which will be used as a lecture-room, and the second for Sunday-school purposes. This structure, however, will not be completed for several months. The entire work, when finished, will cost about $130,000. The pews will be sold in September.

At the Canal-street Presbyterian Church, No. 17 Greene-street, Rev. JOHN THOMPSON, D. D., preached yesterday afternoon, and Rev. DAVID MITCHELL in the morning and evening. A small organ, containing ten registers, with a single bank of keys, built by Messrs. JARDINE & SON, was opened at the services yesterday. Though small it has considerable power, and the tone is exceedingly clear and good. Mr. JARDINE acted as organist. The instrument is placed on the platform on a level with the minister.

The Department of Public Parks announces that if the weather be fine, there will be music by the Central Park Band in Mount Morris-square, to-day, from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M. Musical entertainments will also be given on Tuesday, in Tompkins-square; on Wednesday, in Washington-square, on Thursday in Madison-square, and on Friday, at the Battery, from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M., should the weather be fine.

FRANK SCHOTTHUILLER yesterday morning fell through the hatchway of the Lion Brewery, in One Hundred and Eighth-street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, from the third floor, breaking two ribs, and receiving other severe injuries. He was taken to the German Hospital.

CHARLES VEITENHERRIN, of No. 309 Broome-street, was out riding with his two children yesterday, and when in Fifth-avenue, near Thirty-ninth-street, the horse became unmanageable, and ran at the children was thrown from the wagon, but without receiving serious injuries. The vehicle, however, was badly broken.

Superintendent JOURDAN recently issued an order directing the arrest of newsboys who cheat the public by bawling "extras" when there are no extras. Last morning while sitting in his office, he heard the cry of Extra!" and had the crier brought before him. It was found that the pretended extra was a morning paper. The boy was dismissed with a warning that if again detected in the cheat he would be locked up. Within an hour he was found repeating the deceiving cry by an officer of the Fifteenth Precinct and taken to the Mercer-street Police Station, where he was locked up. He will be arraigned this morning at the Jefferson Market Police Court.

A DISTURBANCE occurred last night in the First Ward, during which JOHN HOGAN, who resides at No. 4 Whitehall-street, received cuts in the head. He was taken to the Station-house, and his wounds attended to, but the Police failed to report details.

WILLIAM FORBES and LAWRENCE REYNOLDS getting into a dispute, yesterday afternoon, at No. 195 Thompson-street, FORBES drew a revolver and fired one shot at his antagonist, which did not, however, take effect. Before he could repeat the experiment he was disarmed, but broke his way, escaped, and the police arrived. He had not been arrested.

THOMAS WALLACE, of No. 150 First-avenue, was assaulted on Saturday evening by JAMES MATHEWS, and received a severe cut on the head. The assailant was locked up in the Seventeenth Precinct Station-house.

A slight fire occurred yesterday on the third floor of the New-York University, corner of Waverley-place and East Washington-square, among some waste paper. It was extinguished by Officer CLARK, of the Fifteenth Precinct.

THOMAS JOHNSON, sixty-eight years old, an inmate of the sailor's boarding-house No. 10 Cherry-street, was choked to death yesterday while eating his dinner.

JACOB SHEPHERD, fifty-seven years of age, of No. 433 West Thirty-seventh-street, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at his residence.

EDWARD FLAHERTY, of No. 2 Vandewater-street, accidentally broke his right arm yesterday. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

BROOKLYN.

About 11 o'clock yesterday morning, JOHN MCNALLY, residing at the corner of North Sixth and Seventh streets, was arrested for beating his wife.

ELLEN BLAKE was arrested yesterday for breaking into the house of JOHN BLYTH, No. 317 First-street.

About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon PATRICK DONOVAN, six years of age, residing at No. 44 John-street, fell overboard, at the foot of Bridge-street, and was drowned. His body was subsequently recovered and taken to his parents.

The window of the fancy-goods store of CHARLES E. PLATT, No. 288 Fulton-avenue, was broken about 5 o'clock last evening and $60 worth of goods stolen therefrom.

LONG ISLAND.

Yesterday afternoon between twenty and thirty Irishmen, most of them under the influence of liquor, as the corner of Cedar and Main streets, Flushing, got into a fight, which threatened at one time to become quite formidable. The efforts of Officers WRIGHT and GILDERSLEEVE, assisted by ORANGE JUDD, who was on his way from church, quelled the disturbance. A number of persons were injured, two seriously. MICHAEL RYAN, alleged to be one of the ring-leaders, was arrested and held by Justice LAWRENCE. RYAN had a fearful wound on his face, and another man, name unknown, was badly injured about the head. The officers are after others of the rioters.

The Divisions of Sons of Temperance of the towns of East Hampton and Southampton will have a grand reunion on the Turnpike this evening. Rev. STEPHEN MERRITT, G. W. P., and other distinguished speakers will deliver addresses.

The homestead of the late GILBERT B. MILLER, of South Haven, together with the hotel and farm, have been sold to the Suffolk Club, whose lands lay immediately adjoining. They intend to erect new buildings, lay out new drives, and otherwise beautify the grounds.

The people of Suffolk County are actively discussing the propriety of increasing the salaries of the County Judge and District-Attorney. The latter officer receives the ridiculously low salary of $200.

The steam revenue cutter Moccasin, with a number of attaches of the Treasury Department, visited Greenport on Saturday.

NEW-JERSEY.

Yesterday afternoon the remains of an unknown man were found floating in the river at the Long Dock, Jersey City. The body was in an advanced state of decomposition, both arms and the face having almost entirely disappeared. From the dress it is supposed the deceased was a sailor. Coroner BURNS ordered the body to be interred.

Officer HARRIGAN, of the Hoboken Police, was assaulted, yesterday, by JOHN NICHOLSON, who had been arrested at the request of Mr. JOHN HARRON, a liquor-dealer, residing in New-York. HARRON stated that NICHOLSON had followed him and had attempted to beat him. While NICHOLSON was in the custody of the officer four of his friends came to his rescue, and a fight ensued in which the officer was injured. NICHOLSON was afterward again arrested and was committed to the County Jail.

Aid BURKE, of the Hoboken Police, was called last evening to break up a fight between a man and his wife who lived in a house on the Meadows. Upon arriving at the house he was attacked by both man and wife, the latter attempting to strike the officer upon the head with a hatchet. She was prevented by the efforts of two citizens, who came to the officer's rescue. The names of the parties engaged in the affray could not be obtained until their arrest could be effected.

Yesterday forenoon MICHAEL KELLY was arrested in Jersey City on a charge of stealing $40 from a fellow-boarder named HENRY DOYLE, in Hoboken. The money was in DOYLE's trunk, and during the absence of the latter it is alleged KELLY stole it.

Recorder POTT, of Hoboken, yesterday, dispersed of thirteen prisoners who were arrested for drunkenness and fighting. The cells remained full of prisoners after these were taken away.

Two mad dogs were shot in Hudson City and one in Bergen, yesterday, by the Police.
